Gift goes swimmingly

Gift from Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen's four children, new heated swimming pool at Government House received first try-out Wednesday morning from vice-regal representative, who likes to swim twice daily for physical fitness. Pool, 44 by 25 feet, located on south side of Government House, has still to get finishing touches.

Oh, how the money Rolls in

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Rolls-Royce dealer Charles Schmitt didn't notice the recession Wednesday — he sold one man seven of the classic cars for more than $1 million.

Among the seven were the Queen Juliana Rolls-Royce Phantom, worth $280,000, and a 1950 Rolls valued at $200,000.

Schmitt would not disclose the identity of the buyer, but did say the man was in the coal business in Kentucky and planned to start a museum exhibiting all the 78 special versions of the prestigious automobile. He said the same purchaser had previously bought Rolls-Royces worth $1.6 million.

Next move up to provinces

Trudeau won't ease oil tax demands

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, stepping directly into the growing resources dispute with the provinces, refused Wednesday to back down an inch on his government's controversial taxation policies.

In a major Commons speech, he defended Ottawa's plan to charge income tax on royalties paid by resource companies to the provinces. He rejected Alberta and Saskatchewan claims that Ottawa is trying to take control of resources.

Both Ottawa and the provinces must co-operate to ensure that oil, natural gas and mineral companies can survive, he said. But Ottawa had already modified its position and the next move was up to the provinces.

He said the federal government must prevent the total oil and gas revenue windfalls from going to one or two provinces. All Canadians had a right to share in the wealth, he argued.

He also said proposed changes in the formula for calculating federal equalization payment to poorer provinces was within the terms of a general agreement reached last March when he met with the provincial premiers.

Despite claims to the contrary by Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney, he said, the changes suggested by Finance Minister John Turner in his Nov. 18 budget were in keeping with the March understanding. In fact, Saskatchewan, one of seven poorer provinces receiving equalization payments, would be slightly better off than under the March agreement.

He also disputed claims by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed that there was no advance warning of

To protest land inaction

Chief warns blockades may be erected again

Highways across the province could be closed in a repetition of last summer's blockade by Cache Creek Indians, an Osoyoos Indian chief warned Wednesday.

Chief Jim Stelkia said in Victoria the Osoyoos band, and at least 21 other bands, were "fed-up with the reasonable approach. Our strategy is to close off all roads across British Columbia, with all people affected."

However, Philip Paul, land claims director of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, now meeting in Victoria, said Stelkia's comments did not represent union policy.

But, he added, the chiefs will be discussing strategy today and will not be ruling out forms of direct action such as highway blockades.

Paul said many Indian people did not recognize 24 land surrenders, which took about 24,000 acres of Indian land out of Indian control between 1912 and 1916.

The union has been negotiating with the provinces to have the surrendered lands restored to Indian ownership, Paul said, but the negotiations have been unsuccesful.

"We approached (Premier) Barrett," Stelkia said, "but he wouldn't see us in the Parliament buildings. We were turned away to civil servants who know nothing."

Paul said "regular channels of communication haven't worked," and the union, while it will be discussing different approaches, is "forced to look at direct action."

U.S. senators urge threat to pipelines

WASHINGTON (CP) — Seventeen United States senators suggested Wednesday that the U.S. could either interfere with or tax Canadian oil supplies carried in pipelines across American territory unless Canada removed its tax on crude-oil exports to the United States.

● Gasoline tax posed as measure to deal with U.S. energy crisis. Page 3.

However, a state department legal expert said anonymously that interference with the oil or unreasonable taxation on it would violate international trade laws and would probably be illegal under American law as well.

The suggestion came in a letter to State Secretary Henry Kissinger, signed by 17 senators who represent a broad spectrum of opinion in the U.S. upper house.

"Certainly, it is our hope that such a drastic measure will never be adopted by the United States," they wrote.

But they called the pipelines which cross U.S. territory "bargaining chips" and called on Kissinger "to enter into immediate negotiations with the Canadian government in an effort to eliminate this tax."

Kissinger is in Peking at the moment and there was no immediate comment from the state department.

The letter said:

"As you know, the United States has several bargaining chips that could be used to induce the Canadians to remove this tax.

"For example, most of the oil consumed by Canada east

B.C. may set up tax retaliation

Provincial crown corporation tax procedures will be reviewed by the British Columbia government after Premier Barrett returns from China, Development Minister Gary Lauk said Wednesday.

Lauk denounced the federal government's intention to tax provincial crown corporations to ensure Ottawa collects its "appropriate fair share" of revenue generated by rising oil and gas prices.

The provincial government must look at retaliatory steps to be taken, he said, adding that B.C. "is watching closely" any moves by the Alberta government.

The minister described the federal government's proposal to tax crown corporations as "an outrageous approach."

The federal budget tabled Nov. 18 imposed federal income tax on royalties that resource companies pay to the provinces. They were previously tax deductible.

Confidence vote tomorrow

Turkey totters near collapse

ANKARA (UPI) — Turkey faced a deep crisis Wednesday with the imminent fall of its government, the devaluation of its currency and the threat of President Makarios' return to Cyprus.

The Republican People's Party doomed the new government of Premier Sadi Irmak by announcing the party would vote against it in Friday's confidence vote in the national assembly, thus reopening a 70-day cabinet crisis.

Irmak's fall would reopen a government crisis that began Sept. 18 with the collapse of a coalition under former Premier Bulent Ecevit, who has been trying to force early elections, apparently in hope of cashing in on the popularity he won by sending Turkish troops to Cyprus in July.

The news that Makarios had started home to Cyprus provoked dire predictions.

Makarios was ousted in July by a Greek-led coup. He started home from London Wednesday, with a first stop in Athens.

Foreign Minister Melih Esenbel told a questioner that "the Turkish government will take the necessary measures" if the lives of Turkish Cypriots are threatened.

"Archbishop Makarios has always played the leading role during the incidents of violence and disagreements in Cyprus," Esenbel said.

Alpaslan Turkes, the Cyprus-born leader of Turkey's Nationalist Action party, told newsmen: "If Makarios returns to Cyprus, the Turkish armed forces must launch a third offensive and capture the entire island."

In an unrelated development, Turkey's central bank announced a devaluation of the Turkish lira against nine West European currencies to keep it linked to the sagging dollar. The value of the German mark went up from 5.25 to 5.65 lira and that of the Swiss franc from 4.77 to 5.21.

Physicist arrested

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet physicist Andrei Tverdokhlebov, 34, secretary of the Soviet branch of Amnesty International and a founding member of the Soviet human rights committee, was taken into custody and his apartment searched, sources reported.

Ship fined after spill

COQUITLAM (CP) — The Liberian freighter Ogden Clipper was convicted in provincial court of polluting Burrard Inlet and fined $7,500. The court was told that 10,000 gallons of heavy bunker oil was spilled Jan. 26 while the vessel was loading fuel. A spokesman for the crown said the ship's owners will be faced with an $86,000 bill for cleaning up the spill.

Selassie won't die

Execution denied

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — Ethiopia's military government denied reports Wednesday that it had passed a death sentence against former Emperor Haile Selassie, the African monarch whose stand against fascism before the Second World War moved the world.

The military regime, whose leaders ousted the 82-year-old Selassie, said he was being held under guard in Addis Ababa for his safety.

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Wednesday he had sent a letter to the military government in Ethiopia protesting the recent execution of 60 former military and civilian officials.

'Alberta oil richer by $100 million'

SASKATOON (CP) — The Alberta oil and gas industry will increase its revenue this year by about $100 million despite federal budget stipulations making provincial royalties a non-deductible tax item, John Richards, independent MLA for Saskatoon University, said Wednesday.

He said he obtained his information from a confidential Alberta government report on the effects of federal Finance Minister John Turner's budget on the province's petroleum resource industry.

He said the report stated the oil industry would still be left with a rate of return of between 9 and 10 per cent despite the combined impact of Alberta's royalty provisions and the federal budget.

"Since the Nov. 18 budget reduced by one-quarter the proposed federal income tax on oil and gas, the net profit to Alberta oil and gas industry after deducting federal income tax and provincial royalties of $2.62 per barrel is $1.6 billion, up from $1.5 billion in 1973."

He said the report also discussed contingency plans under which the Alberta government intended to reduce its provincial taxation of the industry by $150 million to $200 million annually to ease the tax burden.

Ottawa's con game 'sickening'

TORONTO (UPI) — Conservative leader Robert Stanfield ripped into the federal government Wednesday night for deceiving Alberta and Saskatchewan in a "con game" on oil pricing and taxation.

"This may seem like slick gamesmanship to the wheelers and dealers in the Trudeau cabinet," he said, "but to me it is one hell of a sickening way to see confederation being abused . . .

● People Tree will help fund. Page 9.

She won't be going home alone this Christmas.

Her boy, Roddy.

Roddy's grandmother.

It's been six years since Roddy's mother has seen her.

This Christmas Roddy will meet the woman, who until this last summer, was never mentioned.

"We fought over how I was living my life," she says to explain the six dark years.

"That's all over and nothing is going to keep us apart this Christmas."

The trip is going to cost money. The kind of money a waitress in Victoria — with a son and no one else — has trouble finding, particularly at Christmas.

The Colonist 500 fund can help make their trip a bit easier. Last year donations to the fund totalled $27,000.

Hijackings and killings not our aim, says PLO

CAIRO (UPI) — A Palestinian leader said Wednesday the Palestine Liberation Organization was against plane hijackings and the killing of innocent people, including Israeli civilians, "be they on aircraft or in their homes."

PLO leader Salah Khalaf made the statement a few hours after the PLO in Beirut announced the arrest of 26 persons suspected of involvement in the hijacking of a British Airways VC-10 and said that it would put them on trial in an open court.

Khalaf, better known by the code name Abu Iyad, said the arrests were made on his orders. He said he hoped the hijacking of the British jetliner to Tunis "will be the last incident of its kind in our time."

Abu Iyad, who is the No. 2 leader of the Fatah guerrilla organization after PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, said "some Arab countries" were primarily to blame for the Tunis hijack because they had been aiding and financing dissenters from the PLO.

Trudeau won't ease plan

the federal plan to charge income tax on royalties.

Stanfield has said Alberta and Saskatchewan would not have agreed in March to limit the price of domestic crude oil to $6.50 a barrel if they had known what would happen.

Trudeau, quoting from a letter he sent to Premier Blakeney and Premier Lougheed before the agreement was reached, said he warned the provinces in clear, straightforward language that new federal taxes would be imposed.

He said his letter expressed concern that new royalties' schedules planned by the provinces would cut the federal government out of its share of rising oil and gas revenue.

No decision had been made at the time on what federal tax increases would be made, he said. But the letter warned that action would be taken.

He said the decision to charge income tax on royalties was the only solution available to the government. The move was announced originally in Turner's defeated May 6 budget and reinstated in last week's new budget.

If the provinces had retained their old royalties schedules, no federal action would have been required. Rising oil and gas prices would have increased the federal share to 13 per cent from 6 per cent and the government would have been satisfied.

Instead, the federal share would have remained at 6 per cent under the higher royalties and the provincial share would have risen to 31 per cent from about 22 per cent.

Canadians generally helped pay to develop the oil industry by buying western crude oil during the 1960s at a price higher than what they would have paid for imported oil, he said.

U.S. senators

of Manitoba is moved in pipelines passing through the U.S. Roughly 400,000 barrels a day of Canadian crude flows through the U.S. to Ontario via the Interprovincial-Lakehead Pipeline.

"In addition, Canadian refineries near Montreal receive more than 500,000 barrels a day of imported crude oil via a pipeline from Portland, Me., to Montreal.

"For this reason, the U.S. is in a good position to curtail, restrict, or tax shipments of crude oil over U.S. soil for use in Canadian

The senators said it was "not our purpose to urge retaliation against Canada."

"It is our purpose, however, to call this matter to your attention and urge the state department to assume a more forceful and purposeful negotiating posture with respect to Canada . . .

"The recent announcement by the Canadian government of a speed-up in their export curtailment schedule makes your attention to U.S.-Canadian relations even more imperative."

The letter was drafted at the instigation of Democratic Senator Lee Metcalf of Montana and Republican Senator Bill Brock of Tennessee, a Senate informant said.

The two were said to have decided on the action after hearing testimony at a Senate subcommittee last week about a White House program to equalize oil prices, eliminating disparities between imported and domestic oil, oil reserves and new discoveries.

The informant, who asked not to be identified, said the hearings were told that Canadian oil, with its $5.20-a-barrel export tax, is probably the most expensive in the world and the import of Canadian crude at current prices would complicate the equalization program.

Treasury Secretary William Simon said soon after the tax was imposed that he sympathized with the Canadian action, although he felt the tax was set too high.

The senators' mention of the pipelines carrying Canada-bound crude across U.S. territory comes only three weeks after a meeting in Ottawa to discuss the security of such oil supplies from interference or unfair taxation.

NOTES TO YOU . . .

Having enjoyed every minute of a life-long love affair with comic strips, I feel reasonably qualified to make comment on the artistic endeavors of Graham Harrop, the young Victorian whose new strip, The Gullibles, is now appearing every day on the editorial page of this journal.

To start with, Graham Harrop is using a different approach — he is basing his strip on political satire as well as humor and I think the approach is not only refreshing, but long overdue.

Harrop has something else going for him — he is an extremely fine artist, has a distinct feel for his characters. Believe me when I say the artist bit is a dying art. Many of today's comic strip authors fall far short of excellence in their drawing, which is a pity. Harrop's style is distinctive, clear, humorous. I'm glad he's on our team and I think his strip could become one of the best features in The Daily Colonist . . .

BOB WRIGHT, the Marina fella, sends along a pretty good clipping about the newspaper business culled from the London Sunday Telegraph.

"A newspaper or magazine is not the place to go to see people actually earning a living, though journalists like to pretend they never stop sweating over a hot typewriter. It is much more like a brothel — short rushed bouts of really rather enjoyable activity, interspersed with long, lazy stretches of gossip, boasting, flirtation, thinking, telephoning, strolling about the corridors, sitting on corners of desks, planning to start everything tomorrow.

"Each of the inmates has a little specialty to please the customers. The highest paid ones perform only by appointment, the poorest take on everything and anybody. The editors are like madams — soothing, flattering, disciplining their naughty, temperamental staff but rarely obliged to satisfy the clients personally between the printed sheets."

And to think I've been working all these years in houses of ill repute without knowing it . . .

WELL, WE HAVE HAD our little exercise in justification. The B.C. Legislature has been adjourned after a couple of weeks and our premier and some of his members were off in China for a good part of the sitting.

But really, did you expect more? This was nothing more than window dressing in order to justify the doubling of salaries for members. You will recall that the premier stated the increased payments would be necessary because the house would be sitting twice a year instead of the traditional once.

Can there be any doubt now, in light of this quickie session, that the two-session concept was nothing more than an excuse for the pay hikes? Just another example of our leaders going along on the assumption the voters are gullible sheep anyway . . .

THE FOOD SHORTAGE has been given much play of late, but I think the Canadian Churchman, the national newspaper of the Anglican Church of Canada, summed it up best in a not-so-long-ago editorial.

"Last year the world's population increased by 75 million to 3.6 billion, but food production went down one per cent as did the world's fish catch.

"Global grain reserves are a mere 29 million tons, just enough to feed 750 million Chinese for a few months.While we worry about the price of bacon, most people in the world worry about the next meal—not what the menu will be, but whether it will be.

"The causes of world-wide shortages are many — drought, failure of wheat crops, continuing shortages, floods and a decline in the dollar. But there are a couple of causes not often mentioned in affluent Canada—sheer gluttony and selfishness. For example, the increasing demand in the western world for meat means an increasing demand for animal food, converting agricultural produce to animal protein. It's the most inefficient way for humans to get protein. One acre of land gives 10 times as much vegetable protein as animal protein and it's just as nutritious.

"How long will the wretched of the earth allow us to moan about the high cost of living in Canada while those unknown unmourned poor die that we never hear about on the evening news.

"Food is not produced in our western world to feed people. It is produced for profit. The farmer fears that if he grows everything he can, he will produce a glut on the market that will depress prices. There must be a radical change — food must be grown to feed all people, not for the profits made."

All true, but unfortuneatly, all too naive and altruistic as well. In other words, don't go blue in the face waiting for it to happen.

Your good health

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When a person chews food, don't the cheek glands secrete a fluid to help break down the food? If one constantly chews gum, doesn't this "fool" the glands?

On an empty stomach couldn't this gland fluid cause a stomach ache? This is my own theory. —D.J.D.

An ingenious theory — but wrong.

The parotid glands in the cheek produce ptyalin, an enzyme that starts digestion of starch, converting it into dextrose and maltose.

Chewing gum promotes secretion of saliva but it hardly fools the glands. If you want to try an experiment, put a small morsel of bread in your mouth. It will gradually disintegrate and finally disappear even without any chewing, although of course the bread will break up more rapidly if you chew it.

Chewing gum wouldn't produce a stomach ache. If it did — there'd be a lot of stomach aches.

He'd injure, not kill

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A defence witness recounted a bizarre tale at the murder trial of Peter Demeter Wednesday and resisted a harsh cross-examination attempt to shake his story.

Joseph Dinardo, a 31-year-old former boxer born Gabor Magosztovics in Hungary, told court that Christine Demeter offered him $10,000 to beat her husband to death a week before she herself was found murdered. He testified under protection of the Canada Evidence Act.

Dinardo's criminal record stretches back to 1958, when he was convicted on a break and enter charge.

Since then, he has served time in jail on charges of break and enter, common assault, assault causing bodily harm, theft, possession of stolen goods, arson and passing counterfeit money. He now faces 7½ years in jail on the last two convictions.

Dinardo told court he was a good friend of Laszlo Eper, whose name was mentioned earlier in the trial, Eper was killed by Toronto police in August, 1974, after escaping from Collins Bay Penitentiary where he was serving a life sentence for the attempted murder of a Hamilton policeman.

Dinardo testified that Eper acted as middleman between himself and Christine Demeter early in July, 1973.

Dinardo said he and Eper drove to a west-end shopping plaza, where they met a "blonde, good-looking woman" who talked with them in her car. The witness said that from photogtaphs he saw later, he recognized the woman as Mrs. Demeter.

"She asked me if I wanted to make $10,000," Dinardo testified. "She said she wanted her husband hurt and I said I was willing to break his hands or his legs for that money."

Dinardo said he told her he would do the job, but she would have to have someone "set up" her husband. He said she told him she had a friend who would make the arrangements.

"She said I should beat him to death," Dinardo told the court. "I was willing to break his hands and legs and rob him, but I wasn't willing to kill him."

The witness then recounted that he saw Eper once more, the night Mrs. Demeter was killed. Dinardo said the man came to his apartment and his trousers were caked with blood from the mid-thigh level to his shoes.

"He was real upset, like hysterical," Dinardo said.

Under harsh scrutiny during cross-examination by deputy crown attorney Leo MacGuigan, Dinardo stuck to his story, denying that he was paid to give his testimony or was promised anything to appear.

Gasoline tax posed in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns said Wednesday the United States must deal with the energy crisis by adopting a policy of austerity, including a possible gasoline tax.

In testimony before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, Burns said the Ford administration's measures to limit energy consumption have been inadequate.

He said "much sterner measures" must be taken to demonstrate that the U.S. can reduce oil imports and diminish energy consumption.

The international energy situation is so grave, Burns said, that stringent U.S. steps are neded. He said preliminary planning should begin on varying options.

"These might include a sizable tax on gasoline, or on imports, of oil, or on automobiles according to their weight or horsepower," Burns said.

Two days ago, Treasury Secretary William Simon told the same committee he also thinks a tax on gasoline might be in order.

Burns declined to say if he had recommended a gasoline tax to President Ford, who has repeatedly denied he is considering such a tax.

Burns and Simons were testifying on a proposed $25-billion international lending fund which western industrial countries would establish to help member countries retain financial stability as oil import prices increase.

Burns said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has taken in $75 billion in oil revenues for the first 10 months of 1974, three times the total of last year. He predicted the revenues will be about $100 billion for 1975.

To check a spreading evil

EVER SINCE JOHN MUNRO was appointed federal minister of health and welfare in 1968 Canadians have been awaiting implementation of promises for an organization to combat narcotics traffic and control addiction. It was Mr. Munro who insisted this was the responsibility of the federal government, and that only under federal jurisdiction could an effective program be designed.

There have been studies and commissions, of course, and all manner of recommendations. But in fact Canada is no nearer to a solution, or an honest attempt to a solution, to this urgent problem, than it was when Mr. Munro first pledged a full-scale offensive against drugs and the drug pedlar six years ago.

The government has moved, however, in the area of the users of hashish and marijuana. For them risks are less, although the deterrents are still there. No longer does possession come under the Narcotics Control Act; and under the Food and Drugs Act it is now punishable with lesser penalties: for a first conviction a maximum fine of $500, or three months' imprisonment.

Previously simple possession could be punished with a fine of $1,000 or six months in jail, or both.

The amended law—which, incidentally, originates with the Senate—proposes removal of the mandatory seven-year term for importing or exporting cannabis "if the convicted person can prove that he transported the drug for his personal consumption."

This might be difficult if the amount involved were substantial, and therefore the section is effective.

Conviction on such a charge, obviously and properly aimed at the trafficker, still carries a mandatory prison sentence; but the minimum is reduced to three years and the maximum to 14 where formerly they were seven to life imprisonment.

Cultivation of cannabis is discouraged by an increase in the maximum penalty from seven to 10 years. Presumably depending on the size of the plantation, prosecution can be made on indictment or summarily. A summary conviction calls for a fine of $1,000 or 18 months in jail, or both.

In the face of recent findings the new schedule of penalties for cannabis crimes is not too harsh. Where there had been a tendency to think of "pot" as something no more harmful than aspirin and its habitual use a search for "a harmless high," the National Institute on Drug Abuse in Washington sounded a warning only last month: marijuana or hashish can affect the body's resistance to disease and may lead to genetic implications—in plain language, birth defects.

Moreover, there is a steadily mounting volume of evidence to show that hard drug addicts, the users of cocaine and heroin, for example, are largely recruited from among the users of soft drugs, the pot-heads, the hashish sleepers and even the glue sniffers.

When it is remembered that only a year or two ago there was agitation for the legalization of the use of cannabis, a matter seriously discussed in influential circles, the Senate's amendments look sane and sensible. They provide the instrument to excise a spreading evil.

The old order changeth

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE changes gradually but continuously with use and misuse and it seems we must accept this fact, reluctantly — and while still, from time to time, putting up a fight. The worst recent loss to the language is the bright and cheery word gay, which the homosexuals have appropriated to describe themselves, without a by-your-leave, thus spoiling many an old song. The only hope is that a fad will fade, as so many do, and the word will revert to its previous meaning.

In any case, we should not like to be called gay in our writing, for instance, of the happy season ahead. And it similarly was a shock to read in Hansard recently that the Colonist had written "viciously" about something.

The matter at hand in the legislature was the assessment of the former premier's land on the edge of the city of Kelowna as agricultural, and Premier David Barrett — a man of superior education, according to his credentials — had this to say:

"It was a shocking case to the point that even the Victoria Colonist, which is not a notorious socialist newspaper, for those who may not have divined that at this point, wrote a particularly vicious article attacking the former premier for allowing that situation to remain."

Just to be sure, we consulted our Concise Oxford, and found "vicious . . . Of the nature of vice, morally evil or injurious . . . addicted to vice . . . having vices; (of language, reasoning, etc.) incorrect, unsound, corrupt . . . bad-tempered, spiteful . . ."

What a nasty thing to say!

But then, only a page later, and talking about any MLA being so low as to accuse another of forgetting to tell the appropriate persons that tax relief was available to non-profit groups under provincial legislation — or something to that effect — Premier Barrett said:

"I would viciously attack any MLA who would make such a suggestion. . . ."

We are — very slightly — consoled.

. . . and now

SOMEDAY soon we expect to hear a young neighbor who "conferences" a lot admonishing his child, "At this point in time, at this point in time!"

What he will mean, of course, is "Now, now!"

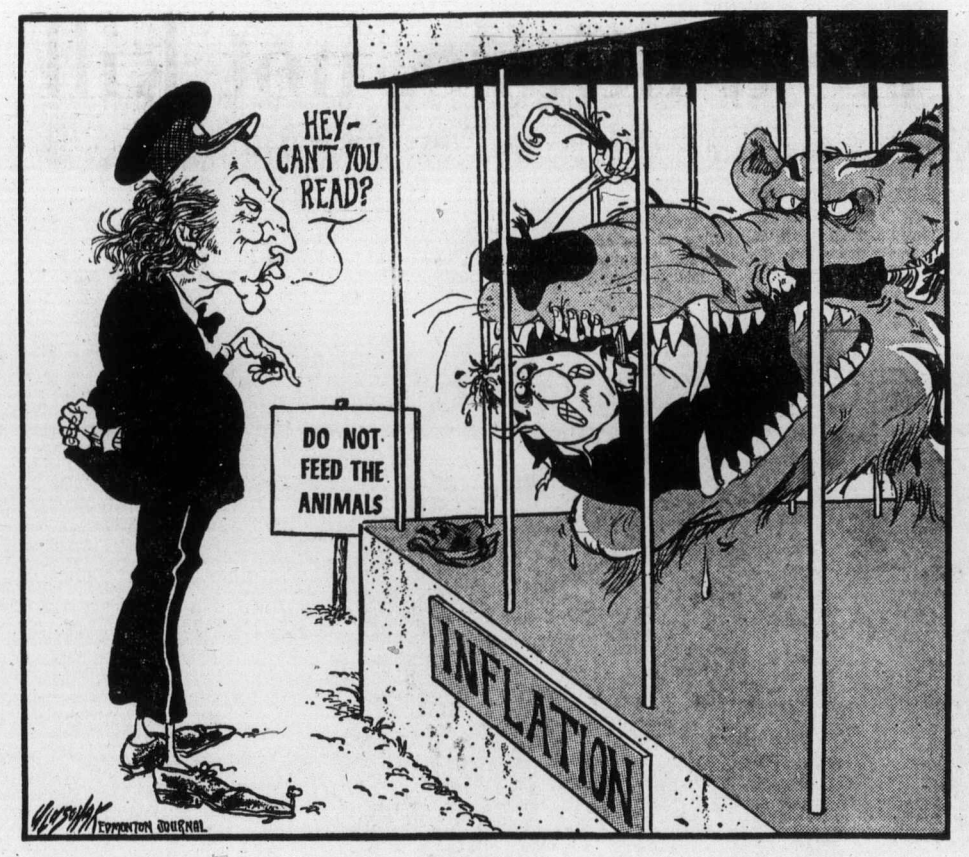
But in any event, we won't blame the young neighbor for the way he talks. He is only endeavoring, no doubt, to keep up with the ever-ongoing progression of sequential moments. You know, the times.



Ottawa Offbeat

A new wing sprouting

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

Out of the three-time failure at the polls of the Progressive Conservatives — or the Liberal-Conservatives or Social-Conservatives, as the party's right wing calls them — are emerging the conservative-Conservatives.

Jack Horner, the seven-term rancher MP from Alberta's constituency of Crowfoot, is their leader, and with representation in Parliament from all sections of the country, they now are openly opposing established Progressive Conservative doctrine.

They are doing publicly on the floor of the House of Commons things they might have hesitated to do even in the privacy of their offices in previous Parliaments.

They are opposing the welfare state concept — initially borrowed from the New Democrats — of the guaranteed annual income which now is becoming official party policy of the Liberals.

And they are questioning Prime Minister Trudeau's concept of bilingualism, which pressures for the use of two languages in the nine English-speaking provinces, and tolerates the designation of one as "official" in the tenth.

Their emergence into parliamentary prominence promises a struggle with the "Red Tories," as the progressives called themselves, when the party convenes, as now is likely as early as next fall, to choose its new leader.

But no more. Three elections proved they left too little for the voters to choose between them and the Liberals, or even the NDP, leaving too many Conservatives with no place to go.

So now the thrust is to the right.

Two examples of this new conservative-Conservatism:

The first, Otto Jelinek, the former world figure-skating champion, two-term Tory MP, and one of the two Conservatives who survived the Liberal sweep across Metro Toronto.

Hear him on bilingualism.

He has a new angle.

He sees it as a diversionary tactic of Prime Minister Trudeau.

Recalling how heavy the prime minister came down on a promise of even more pressure for bilingualism — and how lightly he brushed off, with a single sentence, the inflation crisis, Otto Jelinek figured he had the answer.

"The fact that the prime minister considers bilingualism the most critical issue is completely beyond comprehension," Otto Jelinek told the Commons.

"Except," he added, "what better way to avoid the real issues facing the country than to create and talk of a false one?"

Then Otto Jelinek asked the questions:

"Has bilingualism affected unemployment . . . or production . . . the housing shortage . . . or driven up the cost of food . . . had any bearing on the rotting of those 28 million eggs . . . or on the worsening crisis in the livestock industry?"

He questioned, too, the wisdom of the prime minister pushing, at a cost of "hundreds of millions of dollars," bilingualism in nine English provinces, and shrugging off any responsibility for official French unilingualism in Quebec.

"I don't like this idea of a language curtain going up right under our noses," said this Czech-born MP who himself, favoring even-handed bilingualism, is studying French.

The second example of emerging conservative - Conservatism is two-term Lethbridge MP Ken Hurlburt.

"Economic security for all is impossible," he told the Commons, "without widespread abundance . . . but abundance is impossible without efficient production . . . which in turn is impossible without incentives for energetic labor and competent management.

"Incentive is simply the right to plan to work, to save, to profit, to enjoy the rewards of effort.

"Incentive is diminished and can be destroyed as government controls, regulations and taxes increase to negate and finally totally deny the fruits of success to those who produce.

In place of beef

Antelope on the menu

By JOHN BORRELL
The London Observer, from Nairobi

A herd of 50 domesticated oryx grazing side by side with beef cattle on a ranch in Kenya's arid southeast may provide at least one answer to the problems of livestock farming in Africa's dry regions.

Scientists who have spent four years on the domestication project have found that the oryx, which is a large antelope, puts on twice as much weight for the same food intake as ordinary cattle. It is easily domesticated and it needs about one-third of the amount of water needed to sustain cattle, giving it a significant advantage in regions of low rainfall.

Furthermore, unlike cattle, the oryx does not have to be innoculated against many of the tropical diseases which pose serious problems for pastoralists in most parts of Africa.

The research has been carried out by the Washington-based American African Wildlife Foundation and its scientists are so excited about the implications of their results that they have approached the United Nations Development Program (UNDP) for nearly $1 million to extend their research for a further five years. They seem certain to get it since a scientific panel asked to evaluate their research for the UNDP has just made a strong recommendation for UN funding.

If further research bears out the initial results the possibilities for Africa's arid regions, particularly the Sahel, are tremendous. "What it means," says the foundation's African director, Robinson McIlvaine, "is that we can probably produce twice as much meat by grazing domesticated oryx in arid areas instead of cattle. This could mean the difference between life and death for some indigenous pastoralists."

The foundation's research started just over four years ago. The scientists first tried buffalo, but they proved too difficult to domesticate. They then tried the eland, the world's largest antelope, but the results were disappointing because the eland's skin is very sensitive to solar radiation and it spends a large part of the day in the shade, thus reducing its food intake. The oryx produced much more exciting results. They found it easy to domesticate, and after monitoring its development they established that it was putting on weight at twice the rate of the cattle feeding alongside.

One of the main reasons for this seems to be that the oryx is a browser as well as a grazer and in Africa's arid areas there is much scrub for a browser to feed off.

No scientific market tests have yet been carried out to test consumer reaction to oryx meat, but it drew a favorable reaction when it was placed on the menu of a resort hotel on the Kenyan coast. One of its attractions for European palates, Mr. McIlvaine says, is that the meat has little fat.

Over the next five years the foundation hopes to extend its research on the oryx and to experiment with one or two other species of antelope, such as the Peters Gazelle which is found in many parts of Africa.

The scientists are particularly interested in building up their herd to a commercial size of around 400 so that they can get a better idea of the economics of large-scale ranching. They are also keen to extend oryx grazing trails into the tribal areas of Kenya and have already persuaded pastoralists from three different tribes to take part in a pilot trial.

There are a number of other important aspects of game ranching they will have to look at before they can be certain of its success. African pastoralists are very conservative people who place considerable importance on their cattle and they may be reluctant to abandon their cattle herds for oryx or other domesticated wild animals.

The contribution game ranching can make to increased food production was discussed at the United Nations food conference in Rome, and the researchers in Kenya will be taking a keen interest in its findings.

The crying out of gloom and doom

By RON POULTON
from Toronto

I was following the thin white line that points every highway driver toward home or disaster, when the voice of Hans Selye came over the car radio. Selye, as you probably know, is the world's leading authority on stress and he was saying there is good and bad stress.

Stress, in other words, comes with the real estate. It puts its imprint on everybody from cradle to grave. You learn to ride with it or flop. It helps as well to know how to duck when experts make speeches predicting that the world is going to pot.

They're at it all the time, these self-appointed Merlins; filling the air with strange alarms. You've heard their stories: The sky is falling; the glaciers are melting; the atmosphere is poisoned; and, any minute now, we'll have to turn in our credit cards and run for the hills.

The last fellow to give us grim tidings (at least, I think he was the last; it's hard to figure the sequence) was a geologist named Kenneth North. He claimed Canada's oil fields would start going dry in a couple of years.

He didn't even put any faith in the Alberta oil sands; and I'm hoping the word doesn't reach a nice, old curator I met in a museum at Fort Qu'Appelle last summer. Somebody had sent him a small bottle full of tar sand. "Sniff that," he said. "There's Canada's future!" If he felt any stress at all, he got it from wondering what his wife was going to give him for lunch.

A couple of days before North pushed the panic button, another expert named Robert Macaulay commanded an audience because he used to be minister in charge of all the oil in Ontario, which hasn't produced any, come to think of it, since the Albertans ran an underground pipe all the way to Petrolia and sucked the province dry.

Macaulay claimed that if new technologies weren't developed fast, all the coal and oil would be gone. To hear him tell it, the lights would go out, the furnace would quit, "and human activity will be centered on a small band around the equator within 40 years."

There must have been somebody within earshot who figured it was high time all those sun drenched citizens on the equator dropped their ukeleles and shared their beaches with shivering Northerners, anyhow. There is, if you follow me, nothing like a negative attitude to take the steam out of the doomsdayers.

Something like this was obviously bothering a professor named H. S. Thayer recently. He is a member of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton and he commented about the wave of apathy that slopped over the land after a bunch of scientists drummed up a concert of warnings about freons.

Just in case you're worrying about running short of things to worry about, freons are the propellants in aerosol cans; and every time you spray an oven, a mosquito or an armpit, they waft into the atmosphere at the rate of a couple of tons a year and start eating up the ozone.

When the ozone layer is gone, the ultra violet radiation from the sun will bombard us all and cause an epidemic of skin cancer in 50 to 80 years.

It is noteworthy that none of these warnings led to any panic buying in the umbrella industry. People went right on stuffing their shelves with aerosol cans; leaving Thayer to wonder aloud, "Why is it so difficult to recognize and acknowledge this danger to the continuance of life?"

The answer is, however, obvious. Man spends his ration of worry on threats he can understand. He worried about where his next meal was coming from until the Industrial Revolution erupted and the Victorians started worrying about scratchy long-johns and the rising cost of ostrich plumes.

The warnings were all around. Some time back, on e alarmist even claimed a body could get cancer from eating burnt toast. There are others who say the world is due to slip its orbit and crash into the sun the day before your holidays are scheduled to start.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Women's group goes too far

Our minister of education, in supporting the Status of Women, has stated that "there is an obvious need for a women's study course in our schools." It is not obvious to me. I see a need for many things, but such a course is definitely not one of them.

What right has a minority, self-interest group such as the Status of Women to interfere in the school system? Especially as they have shown very little concern for children. I object to having young people exploited (for exploitation it is) to feed the petty grievances of this group.

As for elimination of "sexist references" in the textbooks, how supposed leaders in education can so concern themselves with this, yet give no thought to the lack of quality in these books, baffles me.

Take care, Mrs. Dailly, lest you create a monster.

(Mrs.) B. SAQUI,

The case for helping others...

Lately I have read and listened a great deal to people's opinions against help for the poor at home and elsewhere. Unfailingly they point out the mistakes being made by the authorities responsible for the distribution of the goods. There is nothing I can do about that, but I too have an opinion and mine also is based on facts.

At the end of the Second World War, I involuntarily joined the ranks of the bombed-out victims in the Hague, Holland. If it hadn't been for the goodheartedness of people, at home and abroad, who gave what they could afford, there would have been more victims, then, and afterwards.

The night after the bombardment, in the middle of a terrifying holocaust, there was a man doling out slices of bread to the bewildered survivors.

It was March 3, 1945, a Swedish ship had been allowed to enter the harbor in order to unload bread, and perhaps other things, for the starving population of Holland. I don't know who the man was, or where he came from, but he showed us that he cared.

It is people like him who gave us a reason to go on living, not the righteous criticizers, nor the through-hunger - and - despair degenerated looters.

We must remember that we cannot protect ourselves from disaster or grieve by closing our eyes and plugging our ears. However, we may still have time to do something.

- We can let people starve to death and make the innocent suffer by pointing out that some degenerated beings might take advantage of our gifts.
- We can give, in spite of the degenerates, in the justified hope that at least some poor people might get what they so desperately need and thereby remember us as fellow human-beings.
- If we don't give what we can comfortably afford and clearly understand, be it food or otherwise, the consequences might be severe, but when they arrive, it'll be too late to cry.

(MRS.) IDA G. WEISSE,
666 Wagar Avenue,
Victoria, B.C.

. . . And another view

Re the starving millions of Asia and Africa. May I suggest that the western nations supply free food only to the governments of starving people who do not spend million of dollars on armaments.

India spent millions on perfecting the atom bomb and on war weapons yet she and others have not got money to pay for food for their starving peoples.

I suggest that the Canadian government spend their grants of millions of dollars on her own people instead of on the so-called underdeveloped countries, and starving.

I am sure nobody ever made grants to the Canadian people when they were struggling to improve their country.

Behavior at UN 'shabby'

After watching the news this evening (Nov. 22) I felt I must make a comment regarding the recent decisions of the UN during their discussions of the PLO question.

Firstly, I could not believe that such a distinguished body as the UN would even consider listening to the murderers of athletes at the Olympics, of innocent bystanders in airports and of children in Israeli schools.

I was taught in elementary school that it is not polite to walk out on someone when they are addressing themselves to the question at hand. Yet while these so-called diplomats would give audience to murderers, they could not dain to listen to the remarks of a charter member in good standing.

The UN voted to allow the PLO to be seated as observers; there were 37 abstentions in the vote and Canada was one of them. Surely we know how we feel about this question, yet we fear to step on any toes. I wonder why? After all, we have quite a bit of oil left despite all this talk of shortages by 1982.

I guess we have lost some of the intestinal fortitude our fathers and grandfathers showed during the two world wars. Did they fight and die for principles that would allow murderers to receive standing ovations at the UN?

Houseboaters may be evicted – legally

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Staff

Esquimalt, that nice little town where controversies appear to be unthinkable, is about to do something quite nasty.

Mayor Art Young and his six aldermen are determined to get rid of a half-dozen houseboaters who have established permanent floating residence at West Bay Marina.

Young said this week that council may have found a way to "do it legally."

We'll know for sure Monday night when Esquimalt's zoning committee will get a legal opinion of the matter.

It all depends on whether a houseboat can be classified as a boathouse, legally, that is.

Esquimalt has a bylaw regulating boathouses, but there is no reference anywhere to houseboats.

If the lawyer tells the committee Monday that boathouses and houseboats are the same thing in a legal sense, council has the clout it is looking for in its confrontation with the houseboat owners.

A short letter from the town hall and the houseboaters will have to weigh anchor.

Esquimalt wants to get rid of the houseboats because it fears they might be the beginning of a floating slum.

Council also doesn't like the fact that the houseboaters don't pay property taxes. Legally speaking, they aren't on municipal property; their boats are below the high-water mark.

The easiest way out of what council feels is a dilemma, is to tell the houseboat owners to get lost.

This attitude appears to guide council even though the houseboats are neat, well-kept, and offer their occupants different life style.

Council might also consider that there is a housing shortage and that houseboats, which can be built for about $20,000, may be a good alternative.

But it seems that houseboats don't fit into the order of things in Esquimalt.

The only hope the houseboaters have is to fight back until council is willing to make allowances for the new, the different, the unfamiliar.

By ANTHONY TUCKER, from London

The sugar substitute market has received a boost just when it might be most useful. Doubts about the safety of saccharin have finally been dispersed by a massive retrospective study of diabetics.

The study was carried out by the Radcliffe Infirmary at Oxford. Detailed statistical analyses of the records of thousands of diabetics who have taken saccharin for many years have shown that there is no detectable correlation in human populations between saccharin consumption and cancer.

This finally resolves the conflicting evidence of different kinds of animal experiments, some of which indicated that saccharin was safe and some which implied a possible cancer-causing effect. It might provoke a re-examination of the animal-based evidence.

With the latest surveys and forecasts indicating, respectively, that British shoppers are buying about 1,800 tons more refined sugar each week than a year ago, and that next year there may be only about two-thirds of the predicted sugar demand available, the shift to sugar substitutes might be swifter than many think.

A recent issue of the British Nutrition Foundation bulletin lists half-a-dozen potential sugar substitutes, all of which might be better for your waistline and your health than a resolution of the so-called sugar crisis, without taking into account presently available substitutes such as fructose.

The trouble with fructose is its cost, although with cane and beet sugar costs rising rapidly the gap is beginning to narrow. Fructose is the sweetest of natural sugars and the interesting development is the identification of naturally occurring and similar chemical structures in the oak sugars. The implication is that there may be many unexplored routes to low-cost fructose.

The main target of sugar-substitute research is the range of substances which are not simply sweeter than sugar but many hundreds, or even thousands, of times sweeter than sugar. Since in many situations — jam, for example — these cannot replace sugar, they are called artificial sweeteners.

United States manufacturers have been looking hard at a substance called stevioside, which comes from the shrub Stevia reabudiana Bertonia, and is used by natives in Paraguay as a sweetener.

It might be thought that, as a naturally occurring substance, stevioside would avoid the unpredictable and undesired side-effects of a wholly synthetic substance, but this sweetener — altough about 300 times sweeter than sugar and easy to extract — has a steriod component that makes it unacceptable to western food authorities.

There is, however, real hope in certain kinds of berries that would be easy to cultivate, and also, strangely enough, in orange peel. The "serendipity berry" (Dioscoriophylum comminsii) yields a glycoprotein called monellin that has already been cleared in basic toxicity tests in the United States and is around 3,000 times as sweet as sugar.

This substance, like a similar glycoprotein from the Katemfe berry (Thaumatococcus Danielli Benth), at the right dilution appears to stimulate the taste buds in a way similar to cane and beet sugar, and with none of the hard after-taste which disqualifies saccharin as a sweetener for many obese non-diabetics.

Readers' aid sought by cautious family

My wife, family and I are contemplating emigrating to B.C. in the New Year and would like further information prior to making such a final decision.

Through the medium of your newspaper, I would like to invite letters from other emigrants who have settled in B.C. during the past five years describing their successes; and failures in integrating into life in B.C.

By profession I am a technical author but also have trained in industrial instrumentation and would like information on job availability in either profession, preferably the former.

Jersey, too

Sweden, Monaco not comparable

As a visitor to your beautiful city and a reader of editorial pages I cannot help but wonder how the writer of the letter "Taxation riddle a puzzlement" (Nov. 24) manages to equate the country of Sweden with petty places like Monaco and the island of Jersey.

I cannot quote many figures regarding taxation in Sweden but would note that the Swedish people enjoy one of the highest standards of living in the world at the present time, having passed Canada in that category some years ago.

To digress from Mr. Kerfoot's theme, when the Swedish premier was in this area for a visit some time ago, he was questioned regarding B.C.'s brand of Socialism and replied that Mr. Barrett and his crew were merely "dilettantes" in this particular field.

I would mention in passing that my feelings are that the Roosevelt "new deal" of the 1930s was far more socialistic than the "Barrett Years" will be in the final analysis.

'Teachers' eyes reflect dollars'

The recent letter in which the president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association applauds Mrs. Dailly for the legislation regarding teachers' salary negotiations, which approves the use of the Big Stick to clout the people of the various school districts, is another example of the power the teachers' union in particular and the other unions in general have over the present government.

The president's claim, on behalf of the teachers, that Mrs. Dailly's action was democracy at work is, in my opinion, not an example of the normally recognized interpretation of democracy. The basic interpretation of democracy is rule by the majority. The B.C. school trustees, representing all the voters in the school districts, wanted provincial salary bargaining; the teachers' union representing a much smaller number won, because the government interceded on their behalf.

It is noted that the teachers in districts 61, 62. 63 emphasized via the radio, that they are not bargaining on a provincial, regional or zonal basis. However, during last weekend teachers from the three districts joined forces as a zonal group. It is assumed the meeting was for the purpose of establishing a united front against their individual districts with respect to wage and fringe benefit demands.

The cost of education is a tremendous burden on the taxpayer. School District 61 budget has increased from $20 millions to $40 millions in approximately five years and Camosun College has increase from $1 million per year to almost $1 million per month in a similar period. I suggest, subject to maintaining a high standard in the academic fundamentals, it is essential that the B.C. school trustees be given every encouragement in their efforts to decrease the rapid rate of escalation in educational costs.

The current practices of the B.C. Teachers' Union, plus the white paper recently presented to the government, which I understand includes recommendations to decrease the authority of the school trustees (the representatives of the people) in favor of the teachers, plus the most apparent militant attitude of their provincial representatives, plus the recent illegal withdrawal of teacher services in some districts, certainly does not encourage a harmonious teacher-community relationship.

I doubt very much if the current activities of the teachers' representatives enhances the respect of any individual associated with teaching. It is certainly not in keeping with my image of most teachers of earlier years, whose eyes, in most instances, reflected children, not dollars, and they were recognized as highly respected members of the community.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — After falling severely for seven successive sessions western oils finally showed signs of recovery with some healthy increases Wednesday on the Toronto stock market.

Slumping oil refining and pipeline stocks also displayed significant gains as other prices were mixed at the close of active trading.

Hitting its lowest point in four years, the western oil index bounced back 4.62 points to 117.38. It was the first increase since before the federal budget was announced Nov. 18.

Observers suggested Wednesday's recovery may have been largely due to bargain hunting. Many analysts said the rapid drop in oil prices, left the issues oversold and underpriced.

Imperial Oil A gained 1¾ to $21¾; Shell ½ to $10⅝ and Gulf Canada ⅞ to $19⅝. Among the pipeline issues Interprovincial closed up ¼ to $10½ and Trans Mountain ½ to $9⅝.

In other industrials Bow Valley Industries was up 1¼ to $10⅝, Home Oil A 1¼ to $17, Domtar 1⅛ to $22 and Moore 1⅛ to $39⅜.

Royal Bank dropped 1¾ to $26½, Canadian Imperial Bank 1⅛ to $20½ and Bank of Montreal ⅝ to $11½.

Industry survey shows decline

Taxes, royalties hit mine funding

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

More fuel for the mining industry of B.C. in its struggle against what it feels are repressive royalty and taxation measures by governments was made available Wednesday with the release of the annual economic report prepared for the industry.

The report by the accounting firm of Price Waterhouse & Co., produced for the sixth straight year, shows that while 1973 was a good year for mining in this province, there is strong proof that there is a continuing decline in development and exploration.

Release of the report was made here Wednesday morning by The Mining Association of British Columbia. Association President James Tough of Vancouver, in making the release, said that one of the major problems facing the industry is that the borrowing of funds in the capital market is getting more and more difficult because of pesent-day uncertainties.

Another mining association executive, Saul Rothman, said at a press conference at which the report was made public that there is a three-year gap in exploration activities now created by taxation reform and that this gap will show up again and again in future years.

Listed among the report highlights were:

● Sales revenue for 1973 at $911 million was 76 per cent higher than 1972 and copper sales provided more than half of that revenue at $488 million;

● There were 29 operating mines in B.C. in 1973 and they showed record net earnings of $231 million, representing a 24 per cent return on shareholders' investment. This compared with a 1.7 per cent return in 1972 and a 9.8 per cent average return over the seven-year period 1967-73;

● Net capital inflow fell from $262 million in 1972 to $200 million in 1973, the lowest of any year since 1967. Loan capital and advances raised were only 18 per cent of their 1972 level, at $29 million, while loans and advances repaid during 1973 were $185 million compared with $55 million the year before;

● Contributions to governments, including taxes and other payments, reached $128 million, 62 per cent more than 1972;

● The industry received $1.008 billion in cash funds from sales revenue and new capital in 1973. Of this amount, 38 per cent went to suppliers, 16 per cent to employees, 13 per cent to governments, 18 per cent to repay loans previously raised and 9 per cent for interest and dividends. The remaining 6 per cent was retained for use by companies;

● Exploration and development expenditures of $33 million were only 45 per cent of the 1972 level. This figure is expected to be only $7 million by 1976.

● Capital expenditures were $51 million in 1973, and $45 million of that was in replacement of existing equipment and facilities. This represented only 45 per cent of 1972 expenditures and only 15 per cent of the record high level set in 1971.

More than two years after major copper find near Kamloops, Afton Mines project still stands idle, although much more exploration work has been carried out. Company said in annual statement that taxation uncertainties are delaying project.

Contributing to the major increase in production was the existence of six new mines and a full year's production from them.

Tough said that many of the mining industry's major problems started as far back as 1967 with the Carter Report on taxation. Capital expenditure across the country has been on a general decline since then, he said and only in Quebec is there normal activity at the moment.

"Then Benson (Edgar Benson, then finance minister) came up with more modifications with the White Paper in 1971," Tough continued.

"That was fine, because we felt that we knew where we stood with regard to taxation until at least 1977. Many low-grade mines were brought into production that otherwise wouldn't have been.

"Then the B.C. government brought in Bill 31 (the Minerals Royalties Act) and that really hit some mines that were just going into production. Was it immoral? It was unethical, at least," he continued.

"These things are observed in the financial world so we have had many problems borrowing money for mining. People who lend money want to be assured that they're going to get it back," Tough added.

Tough drew a scenario for the industry unless ground rules are made more favorable. He said that he could see the whole thing winding down to a few high-grade operations but the supply of refined ore will drop drastically as a result.

"The two levels of government have to decide if they really want that situation. If they will be happy with no mining industry then that's the way it will be," Tough said.

Speaking on the current debate between Ottawa and provincial governments, Tough said that the federal government has made it quite evident that it is willing to tax crown corporations at the full 50 per cent that the industry now pays.

He added that the industry, he felt, would be quite happy to stay within that 50 per cent framework if the two levels of government can come to agreement on the royalties-taxation problem.

Minister first

Mining Association of B.C. President James Tough said Wednesday that the Price Waterhouse and Co. report was given Tuesday to B.C. Mines Minister Leo Nimsick before it was made public.

"He seemed more preoccupied with his trip to Europe than with local conditions," Tough said. "We discussed the report with him for a few minutes before he went to lunch."

Statistics cost $30,000

The annual mining report for the B.C. industry cost is "about $30,000" said association president James Tough on Wednesday.

Douglas Little, an association executive member, said that between 500 and 600 copies are printed.

Tough said that 49 reporting companies fill in a questionnaire annually to form the basis of the report. All the editorial comment contained in it is provided by the Price Waterhouse firm.

Frank Walden, a partner and vice president of Heal Shaw Walden Ltd., communications consultants of Vancouver, said that the association spent between $40,000 and $50,000 in the past year on newspaper advertising that explained the industry position in its fight against Bill 31.

Copper control 'won't succeed'

Mining Association of B.C. executive member Saul Rothman said here Wednesday that he didn't think that copper exporting countries that said recently that they would reduce production in order to drive prices up would succeed, "because they only control about one-third of the normal consumption of world markets."

Rothman said that Canada does not belong to the Council of Coppr Exporting Countries which announced a reduction of 10 per cent by its members after a Paris meeting.

Chile, Peru, Zaire and Zambia agreed to the cutback of 10 per cent as of Dec. 1. Copper prices on the world market have fallen from $1.52 a pound to 62 cents during the current year.

Gen. Augustin Toro of Chile, returning from the Paris meeting, said in Santiago Tuesday that other countries not present at the meeting have agreed to go along with the production cutback.

Copper exporting countries, also include Mexico, Australia, The Phillipines, Algeria, Canada and Poland. The United States and the Soviet Union are the world's leading copper producers but export very little because of domestic demand.

So we want to interest you in our Industrial Training Program.
We'll help you develop your own training program for people who cannot get or hold a job (for any one of a number of reasons).
We can pay all direct training costs. And if your project qualifies, Canada Manpower could pay as much as 85% of each employee's salary, up to a maximum of $130 per week per trainee for the duration of the training plan.
You, in turn, will set up the course, with the assistance of the province of British Columbia, and will be responsible for the training.
Sit down with an Industrial Training consultant at your nearest Canada Manpower Centre soon, and together we can design a training program that will benefit you and your new employees.
Because when you give a person a chance, you've got the best and happiest employee of them all.

Autoplan taking over

The Insurance Corporation of B.C. will establish its own offices in all communities formerly served by the B.C. Automobile Association.

BCAA informed the government recently it would be dropping out of the ICBC Autoplan system at year end.

In making the announcement of the new offices Tuesday, Transport Minister Robert Strachan said nine Autoplan offices would be established.

Defaulting borrowers lose driving licences

Drivers who fail to repay money borrowed to buy Autoplan insurance will have their driver's licences lifted next year.

In one of the final debates of the fall session, the legislature agreed Tuesday to give the superintendent of motor vehicles the right to ban from driving any motorist who has borrowed money under the government-Royal Bank plan but has failed to make repayment.

But Provincial Secretary Ernest Hall told the legislature that the law will not be retroactive.

"No action will be taken against 1974-75 offenders," Hall said. 'The Royal Bank will have to take its own bumbles on that."

The bank, in co-operation with the provincial government, agreed a year ago to loan insurance funds to any motorists without credit questions.

David Anderson (L—Victoria) told the house the figured the bank had lost close to $750,000 on the deal, which involved approximately five per cent of all B.C. drivers.

Anderson fought a losing battle to have the new law (Section 10 of omnibus Bill 178) held in abeyance at least until the spring.

He claimed the bank had made its offer to the government in the hopes of attracting more government business its way and it should now be left alone to collect its own debts without the aid of a club from the government.

"They came in with the offer of money and frankly hoped to attract 40 per cent of autoplan insurance fund business," Anderson said. "They got 5 per cent. And the 5 per cent they got were the bad risks who couldn't raise the money anywhere else.

"The 62,000 people who took out Royal Bank loans were the people least able to pay the money back," Anderson said.

Transport Minister Robert Strachan said the same basic rules applied under private insurance. "If you didn't pay your insurance, you lost the right to drive "Strachan said.

After lengthy debate the section was approved.

ARE WE COMMITTING SEXUAL SUICIDE?

What are the dangers of continued sexual freedom and equality? What will really happen if we follow the advice of today's "happy hookers, sensuous psychiatrists, pornographers, gay liberationists, swinging priests and playboy philosophers"? In an article that's sure to provoke comment and controversy, author George Gilder argues that both men and women are the losers in today's so-called sexual revolution. Are love and marriage still essential to the social order? Where is the women's movement leading us? Read one man's sobering prediction in THE SUICIDE OF THE SEXES. These tomatoes are really hot

This year's fall crop of hothouse tomatoes is the best in 15 years, according to Saanich grower Jack Arnaud.

Arnaud, of 6432 Patricia Bay Highway, explained in an interview Monday the fall crop was planted at the beginning of August and harvesting began last month.

As the season progressed, he said, it became obvious this crop would be "exceptionally good."

"Our average yield this season is 20 per cent higher than last", he said, and he added the quality is also greatly improved.

He said the tomato plants benefited from cloudless fall weather.

Huge game haven sought

By JON FERRY
Colonist Reporter

A proposal to set aside a 284-square-mile big-game wilderness in the Spatsizi region of northwestern B.C. as an ecological reserve climaxed Wednesday's annual meeting of the recently-formed provincial ecological reserves committee.

The proposal, presented to the committee at its University of Victoria hearing, calls for protection of a "unique ecosystem" including big-game now threatened by hunting pressures.

The rugged alplands of the Eaglenest range and the smooth Spatsizi Plateau provide a haven for the giant Osborn caribou, Stone's sheep, mountain goat, grizzly, timber wolf and other large mammals.

Rejected earlier

A similar proposal for a park reserve was turned down 18 years ago by the Social Credit government.

But now provincial ecological chairman Dr. Bristol Foster (former Provincial Museum director) says he will recommend the NDP government make up for lost time and slap protection on the region by next hunting season.

Since its inception three years ago, the ecological committee has established 55 reserves to benefit scientific research.

Total area of all 55 reserves so far is about 90,000 acres.

Limited hunting

The new reserve proposal — outlined to the committee by two zoologists, a botanist and a big-game outfitter — will mean setting aside 181,757 acres with no hunting and a further 1.34 million acres as a buffer zone with strictly limited hunting.

Foster told the Colonist there appeared to be no major reservations from provincial mining and forestry authorities at Wednesday's hearing about the mammoth reserve, the closest thing to an East African game park that the province possesses.

Marine reserves

Several of the others called for setting aside for the first time below-high-tide marine reserves, enabling scientists to study samples of endangered flora, soil and animal life intact.

U-Island marine parks were proposed for Rupert and Holberg inlets, the Satellite Channel Centre (at the centre of Saanich inlet between Salt Spring Island and the Saanich Peninsula), for Botanical Beach, Port Renfrew and for the Openit Peninsula.

The committee aims to set aside 100 reserves by the end of 1975. "Top priority," says Foster, is the Spatsizi proposal.

A bit of Olde England

What's this — London in Victoria? People downtown did double-take Wednesday when double-decker bus, an import from London, passed by first British Columbia store of well-known British firm of Marks and Spencer. Store at Douglas and Fort opened to crush of customers.

Richter
... in hospital

Four faint at dinner

Former B.C. agriculture minister Frank Richter collapsed, and three other men fainted, during a B.C. Federation of Agriculture convention dinner at The Empress Wednesday night.

Richter, Social Credit MLA for Boundary-Similkameen, was taken by ambulance to Victoria General Hospital where a spokesman later described his condition as fair.

Two of the three unidentified men who fainted were admitted to hospital and discharged after an hour.

A Victoria city police report gave the reason as "a bit of a closed atmosphere" and not enough ventilation.

Dick Stocks, federation manager, said the Crystal ballroom, where the dinner was held, was "extremely warm" and that the air-conditioning had been turned off during an after-dinner speach by Paul St. Pierre, Vancouver newspaper columnist and a former Liberal MP.

There was a doctor present, he said, and artificial resuscitation was administered to Richter before the ambulance arrived.

The three other guests at the convention fainted within 20 minutes after Richter's collapse but were revived by fresh air. There were 270 persons in attendance.

Landlords cool suite war but united action in air

There is as yet no concerted action among Victoria landlords to withhold vacant suites from the market in protest against the new provincial rent increase ceiling — it's simply up to the individual landlord.

That's the position outlined by Clayton Warren, Greater Victoria Apartment Owners' Association secretary, who said Wednesday he had no clear idea how many local landlords would join the protest action.

"It's up to the individual landlord if they want to take any action or not."

Warren, whose organization represents some 300 landlords operating 11,000 suites in Greater Victoria, said the landlords' new pressure tactic was designed to encourage prospective tenants to write the government asking permission to pay higher rents.

More than 500 Lower Mainland landlords voted Tuesday night at a closed meeting in Vancouver not to offer empty suites periodically and for varying lengths of time in the battle against the government over the new 10.6 per cent annual rent increase limit.

The landlords belong to the B.C. Rental Housing Council, the parent body of both the Victoria and Vancouver Apartment Owners' Association.

However as Warren pointed out, many Victoria landlords were not able to attend the Vancouver meeting.

Three escape flaming car

A man and his two young children escaped unharmed after their car skidded into a ditch, rolled over and burst into flames one mile east of Humpback on Sooke Road Wednesday night. John Farmer, 32, of Sooke, lost control of his car while reaching into the back seat to help his children, according to Colwood RCMP, who were investigating the accident.

Sewage plant gets nod

The Capital Region Board Wednesday gave the planning go-ahead for the Sidney sewage treatment facility expansion by its engineering staff.

The board adopted recommendations of its public works committee that once the alterations start the Sidney plant would become a region facility.

A cost-sharing formula will be worked out to ensure that Sidney taxpayers would not be penalized by the plant expansion which will include connections to the Oceanographic Institute and the Pat Bay Airport.

Capital Region plan adopted

The "major goal" of Capital Region Board chairman J. W. Campbell's term was realized Wednesday when the board adopted the official regional plan.

There was only one negative vote in the resolution that saw the plan adopted without discussion on fourth and final reading, after more than 18 months' study.

The regional plan gives guidelines for commercial and residential development of the entire Capital Region for the next 20 years.

Campbell said he was "delighted" with the plan.

He said the region was "one of the first in North America in which complex urban areas have voluntarily passed a plan of this kind and accepted restrictions on their basic powers to make development restrictions in their areas."

Campbell said there were no plans by the region waiting in the wings for passage of the plan. However, he said preparation of plans for a sewer system in Langford-Colwood would have been impeded if the plan had not been accepted.

'Ghastly murder': three questions unanswered

By JIM BRAHAN
Colonist Reporter

Three questions still remain unanswered today in what was described by Victoria Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre as "the most ghastly bloody murders one could ever imagine."

His remark came during an inquest Wednesday night in the deaths, Sept. 6, of two Esquimalt women whose bodies were found battered, hacked, and stabbed in the storeroom of a neighborhood grocery store at 1325 Esquimalt Rd.

The unanswered questions: Who did the killing? Who left bloody footprints on the floor of the store? Who was a "mysterious" man seen at the door of Ray's Food Market about 2:20 p.m. on the afternoon of the murders.

The coroner's jury ruled that the women, Mrs. Jane Isobel Plume, 51, of 1158 Munro, and Florence Isobel Bevan, 62, of 1324 Lyall, both employees of the store, had been murdered by a sharp instrument by person or persons unknown.

Victoria city police identification officer Bernard Brennan testified that the two women had received a total of 75 or 80 wounds, some of which went right through their bodies.

"This indicates a tremendous amount of force was used," he said, adding that in his opinion a "very good knife" or a knife plus a small cleaver-type weapon, such as a machete, was used.

He also submitted 27 photographs of the murder scene one showing three or four shoe prints "put there by blood from the sole of someone's shoe."

He told the jury there was a considerable amount of blood at the scene but not much "splashing" which indicated the wounds were made after the victims had died.

Christine Green, 1324 Esquimalt Rd., told the inquest she and her boyfriend had tried to return some pop bottles to the store at about 2:15 p.m. the day of the murders and had found the door locked.

Shortly after, she said, she had seen an "older man" apparently trying to open the door with what she believed to be a key. She said the man was wearing gray pants, and a light blue short-sleeved shirt.

Miss Green said that a few minutes later she and her boyfriend returned to the store; this time the door was open and on entering they thought the store was empty. But when she bent over to place some pop bottle cases on the floor she then noticed the two victims lying on the storeroom floor.

Police were then called.

Vivian Harper, 508 Constance, a co-worker of the two women, told the jury they worked four hour shifts generally from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., with the store owner working from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

She said that she wasn't on shift Sept. 6 but it was customary for the three to visit each other at the store regardless of who was on shift. She would have been in the store about 1:30 that day had she not stopped to talk to a girlfriend.

Arthur Squires, owner of the food market, said Mrs. Plume had come to work shortly before 1 p.m. and he had left the store shortly after that when he had received a telephone call from his wife asking him to meet her in Victoria.

"I just couldn't clue myself in," Squires said, describing the scene that faced him when he returned to the store about 2:45 p.m.

He said at first he thought somebody had been hit by a car in a crosswalk near the store. "I just couldn't get myself to believe anything had happened to anybody I knew."

He told the inquest there was only one entrance to the store and that was the front door.

The coroner told the jury the "mysterious man" seen by Miss Green doesn't seem to have been located by the police.

St. Jorre said he also wondered what would have happened if the storeowner had not been called into town by his wife at that particular time, because a man on the premises might have had an effect on the killer's actions.

He told the inquest the store was not located in a large city but in a quiet place with quiet, friendly people as customers, "and a bloody murder takes place."

Suspect arrested in robbery attempt

Police said a young man walked around the store for a while after entering shortly before 3:30 p.m., and then went up to Mrs. Stubbings. He held one hand in a pocket, possibly to simulate a gun, as he said:

Mrs. Stubbings immediately screamed for help from her 26-year-old son, who was working in the rear of the store. When he appeared, the would-be robber fled on foot.

Police said the two store staff members described the would-be robber as 18 to 20 years of age, five feet, 10 inches tall, thin, fair complexion "with peach fuzz" and wearing hip-patched blue jeans.

The Bay Street Armory positively bristled with disaster Wednesday night but this time it was all make-believe.

The disaster exercise started with an explosion that (supposedly) rocked Victoria high school, injuring some 100 students.

It was then up to Victoria's various emergency services to cope with an ensuing flood of casualties while patients were whisked by ambulance from the armory to area hospitals.

The exercise, which started at 7 p.m., was coordinated under the provincial emergency program and was designed to hone the skills of medical and emergency personnel in facing a major disaster.

Traffic was diverted from the armory neighborhood but police reported no major snags — or real disasters.

Esquimalt to keep research facility

That word came Wednesday from Victoria MP Allan McKinnon who said rumors that DREP might be shut down because of defence cutbacks, had been dispelled by the federal government.

McKinnon said in a telephone interview from Ottawa that Defence Minister James Richardson had given his assurance in the Commons Wednesday that there were no current plans to close DREP or cut back on its operations.

Toys on TV scarce, or gone, from stores

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist Reporter

Children whose Christmas wishes are prompted by television ads and reinforced every afternoon in front of the family set could be disappointed on Dec. 25.

Unless their parents act soon.

Jim Hollier of Eaton's, Victoria, predicts there will be a toy shortage, of particularly television advertised items.

Other department store merchandisers agree.

Although the toy shelves at Eaton's are far from empty, Hollier said, pointing to one popular line, "there's no way I should have shortages like this."

Already hotly television-advertised items like the Evel Knievel stunt cycle are extinct in most city department stores and Baby Alive, the doll that eats and "excretes," will be a vanishing breed by this weekend, department store spokesmen are predicting.

Hollier said this number-one-doll-of-the-season is sold out at the factory but he hopes to get more through a distributor.

However if Hollier succeeds the price of the doll will have to go up several dollars from Eaton's $16.99 price to allow for the distributor's profit.

Blame for the toy shortages doesn't rest with Santas elves at the North Pole.

The oil crisis led to a shortage of plastics last spring. Toy manufacturers using plastic products, Hollier said, cut back their lines and raised their prices.

He estimates prices of all toys are up 15 to 25 per cent over last year.

Gaps appearing on shelves

A spokesman for Woodward's said: "People are buying earlier."

Hollier thinks people know of the shortages and are buying early.

A spokesman for The Bay said: "There are alternatives to the popular toys — not exactly the same, but they will do."

Hollier points out the popular Barbie Hair Care Centre has two imitations, both costing a bit less.

Just why a child desires one toy above all else is something psychologists discuss.

The Woodward's spokesman said he has looked at toys he thought would be winners and watched them stay on the shelf.

But to many parents, television advertising is the spur, despite government restrictions in advertising aimed at children in Canada and the U.S.

"Some kids come in here with a broader knowledge of toys than we have," a spokesman for The Bay said.

But a chain-buyer in Vancouver for Woodward's stores said: "Television does not guarantee success the way it did 10 years ago. There are so many items on TV the consumer can now choose," he said.

Local merchandisers agree that television advertising does not dictate a sell-out.

However, the buyer admits television-advertised items usually do better than non-advertised ones. He said the advertised items have "built in TV dollars" that push their price up and some of these same items suffer as a result.

The buyer went on to warn parents that some TV-promoted toys have little play value — the feature that keeps a child fascinated long past Christmas morning.

But still children seem to be asking for TV items.

Some parents are rebelling against the "brainwashing" of their children, says Joyce Hopkins whose Windmill Toys and Gifts, Douglas, specializes mostly in toys imported from Europe.

Miss Hopkins, who said she'd gladly send a wreath to the funeral of the Barbie Doll, does not carry TV toys.

Certainly it would be hard to convince one mother who walked down the toy aisle of The Bay this week while her two girls picked out all their favorites from television, that they hadn't been clued in somewhere.

"They've been brainwashed. They know everything on the market," she said.

Red Kelly, who has been accused by club-president Harold Ballard of being a failure because he "is too nice a guy with his players," showed up behind the bench with a bull whip Wednesday night in New York.

Not only didn't it help, things got considerably worse for the embattled Leafs, one of the big National Hockey League disappointments this season. They did manage to get in two scoreless periods, but in addition to taking a 4-1 beating from the Rangers, they lost two more defencemen to injuries.

Ex-Ranger Rod Seiling, who injured a knee in a collision with Derek Sanderson, and Jim McKenny, who hurt his shoulder, were both lost in the first period. A preliminary report on Seiling said that cartilage damage was likely.

Already on the injured list and not expected back for a month are Borje Salming and Ian Turnbull.

Now winless in their last six games, the Leafs faded after the first period and were outshot, 38-11, in the final 40 minutes. All of the scoring was jammed into the second period with Greg Polis and Sanderson doing most of the damage to the Leafs. Both scored once and drew a pair of assists.

Additional sport P. 14, 15, 16 and 49

Meanwhile, in other action Wednesday, Philadelphia Flyers and Atlanta Flames moved together in the Patrick Division, and Montreal Canadiens scrambled their way to another two points.

Reg Leach scored three goals for the Flyers in their 6-2 conquest of Detroit Red Wings, but the turning point may have come early in the second period when penalty-killer Bobby Clarke scored to give the Flyers a 2-1 lead.

It was 5-1 by the end of the period, and the Wings managed only nine shots in the last two periods. Clarke had four assists to go with his eighth goal while Leach drew one assist.

The Flames, two points behind the Flyers, got the second three-goal performance of the season from rookie-winger Eric Vail and eased by Kansas City, 4-2. The Scouts didn't manage one shot on goal in the second period as Flames finished off the scoring with three goals.

Canadiens, who have seldom managed to make things easy for themselves this season, had trouble in Pittsburgh. They eventually bested the Penguins, 3-2, with Jacques Lemaire breaking a 2-2 tie in the 12th minute of the third period.

In Minnesota, the North Stars recovered from an early shock to outlast Washington Capitals, 6-4. Capitals steamed off to a 3-0 lead, it was well into the second period before North Stars pulled even, and it was 4-4 until 11:01 of the third period.

Bill Goldsworthy, who made the pass for North Stars' first goal, gave his club a 4-3 lead, then broke the 4-4 tie with his second successful deflection.

Victory boosted the Minnesota club into third place in the Smythe Division, only one point behind Chicago Black Hawks.

Canucks end toughest test with 6-1 win over Blues

Vancouver Canucks came out of their toughest test of the season with more than passing marks.

When the West Coast club left home last week for a five-games-in-seven-nights test which had stops in Philadelphia and Boston, it was eight points ahead of Chicago Black Hawks in the National Hockey League's Smythe Division. Canucks return home today with an 11-point bulge.

They made their trip successful by bouncing back from Tuesday's stumble in Kansas City to take St. Louis Blues, 6-1.

The victory, over one of the clubs they have to beat out for a playoff position, gave Canucks five points from five games. They have now played four more games than their closest pursuers, but the Hawks couldn't handle Buffalo Sabres Wednesday and could do no better than 1-1 while Canucks had a 2-2-1 trip.

John Gould, 25-year-old left-winger obtained last season in a trade with Buffalo Sabres, contributed his 12th and 13th goals of the season as the Canucks got away to a 3-0 first period.

It seemed for a while in the second period as if the lead might not be big enough, but Gerry O'Flaherty broke away from a ganging attack late in the second period to stop the St. Louis surge with the 4-0 goal.

In Chicago, Gil Perreault broke a 1-1 tie late in the second period with his 15th goal of the season. It came on a power-play, only 39 seconds after John Marks had stopped Perreault with a trip which drew a penalty.

Sabres, their latest unbeaten streak now at five games, are 13-1-2 since Oct. 24. And in that surge they have beaten Montreal Canadiens three times, the Hawks twice and New York Rangers once, and have tied Boston Bruins.

In West Coast games Wednesday, the Bruins got an unexpectedly sharp argument in Oakland before managing to subdue California Golden Seals, 3-1, and Los Angeles Kings just made it in getting a 3-3 tie with New York Islanders.

Seals, losers in their last six games and in nine out of their last 10, were no worse than 1-2 in the late going. And they were pressing for the tying goal when Gilles Marotte put a stop to things by deflecting a shot by Bobby Orr.

Rare full NHL slate

There have been 18 teams in the National Hockey League only since Kansas City Scouts and Washington Capitals joined this season.

Wednesday night's nine-game schedule was the first in the NHL's history and will happen only one more time during the 1974-75 season.

That occurs Saturday, Jan. 11, when all the teams will again be in action.

Harrison strikes for Crusaders

Jim Harrison's second goal of the game Wednesday night, coming with six seconds left in sudden-death overtime, gave Cleveland Crusaders a 5-4 win over visiting Winnipeg Jets.

The loss prevented the Jets from moving past the idle Quebec Nordiques into second place in the World Hockey Association's Canadian Division.

Harrison, traded to Crusaders by Edmonton Oilers, forced the 10-minute overtime session with a goal at 12:19 of the second period which tied the score at 4-4. Cleveland outshot the Jets, 13-4, in the third period but couldn't beat Ernie Wakely in the Winnipeg nets.

The victory gave the Crusaders a share of second place in the Eastern Division with Phoenix Roadrunners, who dropped a 4-2 decision to visiting Chicago Cougars.

WINNIPEG (4) — Norm Beaudin 2, Bobby Hull, Chris Bordeleau; CLEVELAND (5) — Jim Harrison 2, Gary Jarrett 2, Russ Walker. Attendance not announced.

Hotel Douglas, smarting from an upset loss Monday to Victoria Junior Men, poured it on Wednesday night at Victoria High School.

The hotelmen trounced last-place Stevens Interiors, 105-69, but still couldn't catch the leaders of the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League. London Boxing Club remained two points in front by stopping the Junior Men, 69-61.

John Lauvaas sparked Hotel Douglas with 30 points and took over the individual scoring lead from Jim Cunningham of Stevens. Lauvaas has 167 points, eight more than teammate Tom Hatcher, who contributed 28 points to the win.

Cunningham, who topped the losers with 16 points, now shares third spot with Jim McKay, who netted 26 points to lead the boxers to victory. Both have 156 points.

McBride gains second goal

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bake McBride set two goals during spring training last year — a hitting average of more than .300 for St. Louis Cardinals and baseball's National League rookie of the year honors.

His .309 average as a centre-fielder gave him one goal. The Baseball Writers Association of America provided the other Wednesday in announcing his selection as top rookie.

"I owe most of the honor to Lou Brock," said the 25-year-old McBride at a news conference, referring to the St. Louis left-fielder.

Jenkins' comeback noted

Canadian pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, who compiled a 25-12 record with Texas Rangers of the American League after a 14-16 mark with Chicago Cubs in 1973, has been named Comeback Player of the Year in the AL by the St. Louis Sporting News.

The award in the National League went to outfielder Jim Wynn of Los Angeles Dodgers, who batted .271, hit 32 home runs and drove in 107 runs, rebounding from a .220 performance a year earlier.

Baseball's Hutch Award, voted to a player "who best exemplifies the fighting spirit, desire and character of the late Fred Hutchinson" was awarded to Danny Thompson, who played shortstop for Minnesota Twins the last two seasons with a form of leukemia. Hutchinson died of cancer in 1964 while manager of Cincinnati Reds.

And the second Roberto Clemente Memorial Award has been awarded to centre-fielder Al Oliver. The award is given to a member of the Pittsburgh Pirates who most exemplifies the standards of excellence established by the late Pirate rightfielder. Oliver batted .321 this season.

Captain of Army can't be a loser

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — There's no way Bob Johnson can be a loser Saturday, even if the Army football team he captains gets wiped out again by Navy. Johnson already has his victory over cancer.

Game after game, Johnson has led the Army team onto the field for pre-game calisthenics. He's met the opposing captain and the officials for the coin toss. But he hasn't played a down all season and he won't play Saturday.

Johnson, a top-flight defensive end in 1973, had a cancerous tumor removed from his upper right arm last June. He was in Washington's Walter Reed Army Hospital for almost three months, and a few weeks ago he got the best news of his life.

"The doctors feel they've checked the growth of the cancer," he said Wednesday. "They told me the arm is healing better than they ever thought it would and in six or seven months I'll be as good as new.

"I'll be commissioned and they see no reason why I shouldn't be able to go into combat."

The combat Johnson really wants, however, is Navy, but there's no way. The arm is healing nicely, but it's still brittle.

Dockers explosive in rugby opener

Esquimalt Dockers served notice Wednesday that they are to be reckoned with in the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League.

Dockers, under new-coach Keith Morrison, walloped visiting Parkland Panthers, 54-3, in one of three league matches played.

Claremont Spartans, seeking their seventh consecutive league title, trimmed Spectrum, 23-6; and St. Michael's University School trounced the Titans, 28-3, at Vic High.

Winless in 1974 and gaining only a draw in 13 matches, Dockers piled up a 34-3 lead by halftime, completely dominating coach Don Burgess' Panthers.

Morrison, taught at Glenlyon School for Boys prior moving to Esquimalt.

Doug Angrove, Jim Attenborough and Drew Dennison scored three tries each for Esquimalt. Jim Bergin scored a try and kicked two converts. Gavin Smart had a try and Paf Duncan kicked three converts for the winners. Phil Livesay booted a penalty goal for Parkland, which had a 2-11 record last season.

Spartans held a 13-3 lead entering the second half and were never in difficulty throughout the match. Harold Willers, Doug Burns and Rob Smith had one try each and Paul Molholm booted a penalty goal and two converts for Claremont. Dale Marshall's two penalty goals accounted for all of Spectrum's points.

St. Michaels, which finished with a respectable 8-5 mark last season to finish second to provincial-champion Oak Bay Barbarians in the Eastern Division of the league, ran up a 14-3 lead in the opening half against Titans. Kenty Lai, with two, Dmitri Hardman, Ed Macaulay, Mike Blades and Dave Olson scored the SMUS tries. Olson also kicked two conversions. Rick Cordick booted a penalty goal for Vic High.

In the season-opener Tuesday, Barbarians scored a 29-3 triumph over visiting Belmont-Fisher.

Put a snowplow on your car

Better traction and easier move-offs

Radial design hugs the road to keep the tread firmly on the surface when cornering or swerving. Lower rolling resistance and deep, biting tread get you moving even in the deepest snow.

Steel belts make it more puncture proof

Better handling and steering control

Better Value

UNIROYAL

Uniroyal has a snow tire to fit every car and every pocket book. And you can always say, "Charge it".

Island schools reach B.C. tourney

Three Victoria schools and Georges P. Vanier from Courtenay are the Vancouver Island hopes in the B.C. high-school boys volleyball championship Dec. 5-7 at Mt. Douglas High School.

Mt. Douglas won the Island title Tuesday night while host Esquimalt, the lower Island champion, finished second in the eight-team tournament. Victoria High was third and Courtenay edged out Belmont-Fisher for the final provincial berth. Gulf Islands, North Island and Qualicum were the other teams in the Island tourney.

Prince George, McKenzie, Ogden High School from 100 Mile House, Vernon, Kamloops, Sparwood, Prince Rupert, South Delta Mission, Queen Elizabeth of Surrey, Templeton, Carson Graham and J. L. Crowe of Trail are the other teams in the three-day event.

Tournament-chairman Jim Black of Parkland said the teams will be divided into two sections of nine teams for the round-robin, preliminary play.

Top three teams from each division will advance to the championship round, which begins at 6 p.m. Saturday. The first-place finishers in the preliminary round get a bye while the second-and-third-place teams cross over in the quarter-finals.

Csonka tries acupuncture

MIAMI (AP) — Miami Dolphins' fullback Larry Csonka says he is undergoing acupuncture treatments for his left ankle, injured in a National Football League game against Baltimore Oct. 27. After two treatments in the last two weeks, he said "I think it helped some" although Dolphins lost 17-14 last Sunday to New York Jets. Because of the Dolphins' tight conference race, Csonka said he would continue to play while injured.

Yankee owner may challenge suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn suspended one of baseball's principal owners Wednesday, preventing George Steinbrenner of New York Yankees from operating his club for the next two years.

The action followed Steinbrenner's conviction and subsequent $15,000 fine for making illegal campaign contributions to former President Richard Nixon and others through his Cleveland-based American Ship Building Co.

Persons close to Steinbrenner in Cleveland said he could be expected to challenge Kuhn's order in court.

In a statement accompanying his decision, Kuhn said his action was taken to preserve public confidence in baseball.

"An essential element of a professional team sport is the public's confidence in its integrity. If the public does not believe that sport is honest, it would be impossible for the sport to succeed."

Steinbrenner headed a group of investors which purchased the Yankees from the Columbia Broadcasting System on Jan. 3, 1973. In April, 1974, he was indicted by a federal grand jury investigating Watergate-related charges for making illegal campaign contributions from corporate funds.

In August, with the Yankees in the thick of the American League East Division championship race, Steinbrenner pleaded guilty, admitting the contributions were made and that he influenced some of his company's employees to make false statements to federal investigators and a federal grand jury.

"Attempting to influence employees to behave dishonestly is the kind of misconduct which, if ignored by baseball, would undermine the public's confidence in our game," said Kuhn.

In his decision, the commissioner said he was acting in the best interest of the game and declared Steinbrenner "ineligible and incompetent, for the specific period, to manage, or advise in the management of, the affairs of New York Yankees."

The order does not prohibit Steinbrenner from continuing as owner of the team. Officials in the commissioner's office said they did not know if it would prohibit him from sharing in any profits.

Steinbrenner said he will meet his lawyer, Edward Williams, "in the next few days and will announce our plans early next week."

"We haven't yet had time to carefully study the full decision. But we understand that Mr. Kuhn has found that I am 'ineligible and incompetent.' It's impossible to understand how the commissioner of baseball could call me incompetent."

Gabe Paul, president of the Yankees, said: "I am shocked and distressed by the penalty invoked by the commissioner."

Kuhn said that although there was no evidence Steinbrenner had ever done anything improper with respect to baseball, ignoring the conviction and fine could lead to suspicions.

"It is essential to baseball's success that transgressions of the type here involved by those who occupy positions like Mr. Steinbrenner not be ignored," the commissioner said.

In his 12-page ruling, Kuhn said his decision "is intended solely to be remedial and not in any sense to punish Mr. Steinbrenner."

In his two seasons as general partner of the Yankees, Steinbrenner has been one of baseball's more visible owners, often talking with players in the dressing room and cheering from the club's box next to the dugout.

Kuhn's order will change that, barring Steinbrenner from "engaging in any association whatsoever, with any major league club or its personnel."

In 1953, Fred Saigh, owner of St. Louis Cardinals, was fined $15,000 and sentenced to 15 months in jail for federal income tax evasion. After meeting commissioner Ford Frick, Saigh agreed to sell the team to August Busch, who still owns the Cardinals.

In 1943, commissioner Kenesaw Landis ordered William Cox to sell his interests in Philadelphia Phillies after Cox had allegedly placed bets on games. Cox denied the charge, but sold the team to Bob Carpenter, who still owns the club.

Fairburn, Hillcrest in final

Hillcrest gained a berth in the Greater Victoria elementary schools soccer final Dec. 3 at Centennial Stadium by downing Monterey, 3-1, in an overtime match Wednesday at Henderson Park.

Hillcrest and Fairburn will battle for the title Tuesday starting at 3:15 p.m.

Dave Swenton scored twice and Ian Fraser got the other goal for Hillcrest. Warren Smith scored for Monterey.

The teams were tied, 1-1, after regulation time, requiring two 10-minute overtime sessions.

Birmingham reaches World Bowl

— Alfred Jenkins' daring catch of a punt and Joe Profit's running sparked Birmingham to a 22-19 World Football League victory Wednesday night over Hawaii to put the Americans in the first World Bowl.

Birmingham will play the winner of Friday night's other semi-final game between Memphis and Florida for the WFL's first championship Dec. 5.

Only 15,379 showed up for the 12th home victory without a loss for Birmingham, compared with an average of 37,226 for the previous games.

The Americans had received dispensation from tax authorities to play the game, with a promise that game receipts would be designated toward tax debts.

World record

LONDON (AFP) — Vassili Alexeiev, world and Olympic super-heavyweight from the Soviet Union, beat his own world snatch-and-jerk weightlifting record Wednesday during an international meet. Alexeiev, 34, lifted 535 pounds.

Mountie safe after big Chase

CALGARY, Alta. (UPI) — An RCMP constable was released unharmed Wednesday night after being held captive in his patrol car for almost six hours by two armed men.

Constable Allen John Hurkett, 22, was freed from his captors by a joint force of RCMP and Calgary city police after a six-hour, 150-mile chase by police cars and aircraft. No shots were fired in the release.

Two brothers, aged 18 and 21, were taken into custody, after a brief scuffle.

Hurkett was taken captive about 10 a.m. when he responded to a route accident call at Red Water, Alta., about 60 miles northeast of Edmonton.

"Two men overpowered the constable. One was armed with a rifle and the other took his service revolver. They ordered the constable into the back of the police cruiser and drove from Red Water, through Edmonton to a private home at Drayton Valley," a police statement said.

"After about an hour they got back into the police car and drove down Highway No. 2 to Calgary. Unmarked police cars and a police aircraft followed.

"At 3:45 p.m., the two men were apprehended and the policeman was released unharmed at the Highlander Hotel parking lot in Calgary by a combined force of RCMP and Calgary city police. No shots were fired."

An RCMP officer said he could offer no motive for the abduction. He said the two men had made no demands for the policeman's release. "The only thing they told us was to back off or the constable would be harmed," the police spokesman said.

Louis Russel, who lived longer than anyone with a transplanted heart, died Wednesday in Richmond, Va., from an apparent heart attack.

Dr. Eric Kemp, Russell's cardiologist at the Medical College of Virginia, said Physicians considered the possibility of giving him a second new heart, but were unable to secure a donor.

Kemp said there appeared to be no sign of Russell rejecting the heart he got six years ago but added, "We do not know for sure."

Meanwhile in Cape Town, South Africa, the world's first man with two hearts was gaining strength after his operation Sunday and a Groote Schuur Hospital bulletin said Wednesday his hearts were in "excellent" condition.

The bulletin said all supporting therapy for Ivor Taylor, 58, who received a second heart from a 10-year-old girl, now has been stopped.

Search resumes for man lost in fall

NIMPKISH CAMP — A search was to resume today for a man missing after he and his wife fell 95 feet from a bridge into the Nimpkish River on the weekend.

The search for Harry Bowker, missing since early Sunday, had been suspended owing to high water. However reports Wednesday indicated the river level had fallen enough for the search to continue today.

The body of Bowker's wife, Lorraine, 26, was recovered Tuesday eight miles downstream from the bridge.

The Bowkers, residents of Nimpkish Camp, had attended a dance at Woss Camp 23 miles from Nimpkish Camp, Saturday night, and planned to go on foot to the bridge there to be picked up and driven home.

The bridge, however, had been closed for repairs, and the only span over the rain-swollen river at the site was a plank a foot and a half wide.

Increases for review

Two join rent body

The provincial government Wednesday announced appointment of two members to the Rent Review Commission, which will be responsible for determining allowable rent increases in the province.

Provincial-Secretary Ernest Hall, acting as attorney-general, announced that John Brewin, deputy chairman of the Justice Development Commission, and Bruce McCulloch, manager of the provincial government's management consulting branch, have been appointed to the commission.

Hall said Brewin, a lawyer with the attorney-general's department, will temporarily act as chairman until permanent appointments are made.

He also announced that Nov. 30 is the proclamation date for most amendments to the Landlord and Tenant Act, passed at the fall sitting of the Legislature.

The amendments established the rent commission and replaced the 8-per-cent ceiling on rent increases with a 10.6-per-cent limit, plus an allowance for major renovations, effective Jan. 1, 1975.

Hall said the government has also defined renovations, used in those sections of the legislation which allow a landlord to raise rents to cover 12 per cent of the cost of renovations.

Renovations are defined as alterations ordered by authorities, such as municipal bylaws, building codes or the fire marshal, or "an improvement to an existing service or facility, the cost of which is more than 25 per cent of the rental income chargeable for the residential premises affected for the year preceding the date the improvement is completed."

Hall said this means that a landlord renting a suite at $150 a month would have to make renovations worth at least $450 to that suite, which would result in a rent increase of $4.50 a month to the tenant.

He also said that in determining the value of renovations, the cost of borrowing money to pay for the improvement and the amount of actual or likely increase of the municipal taxes as a consequence of the improvement cannot be included.

Communist schism help to Malaysians

By FELIX ABISHEGANADEN
Colonist-Gemini News Service

KUALA LUMPUR — A major schism exists in the Malayan Communist Party. Documents seized recently disclose the establishment of two splinter organizations. The pamphlets, cyclostyled in jungle camps, speak of "enemies" within the Communist underground movement and call for their quick "liquidation".

They make no attempt to conceal feelings of suspicion among the Communist rank and file of the motive of their leaders whom they brand as being "anti-revolutionary".

Not so long ago Malaysian security forces were confronted by one Communist organization — the MGP. Today they face three. The splinter units are the Communist Party of Malaya — Revolutionary Faction (CPM-RF) and the Communist Party of Malaya — Marxist Leninist group (CPM-ML).

The breakaway factions are bitterly opposed to the original CPM central Committee under secretary-general Chin Peng.

But their objectives, says Home Minister Tan Sri Chazali Shafie, are the same; "the overthrow of the legally constituted Government of Malaysia through armed struggle".

Chin Peng and about 600 of his men retreated into no-man's land along the Thai-Malaysia border when the country became independent in 1957. Since then they have waged a will-o-the-wisp battle — striking at patrols on the Malaysian side and seeking refuge in Thailand.

Since 1957 Chin Peng's rank and file has swelled to between 1,600 and 2,000. Over the years they have made several unsuccessful attempts at penetrating Peninsular Malaysia.

Events leading to the split go back to 1967 when Chin Peng — not seen since 1957 — and his lieutenants are reported to have uncovered an attempted coup in his units. Twenty recruits accused of being "enemy" spies were executed. One communist document says: "Two terrorists suspected of spying alleged that the entire guerrilla base was infested with enemy agents."

In February 1970, the CPM Central Committee accused all recuits joining the "Liberation Army" after 1962 of having been bought over by the "enemy". The order then went out for the "general liquidation" of all infernal spies.

A regiment under the command of State Committee Member Yat Kong was directed to execute more than 20 listed internal spies and those who had joined the cause after 1962. Kong rejected the order and accused the Central Committee of being controlled by an anti-revolutionary revisionist clique. The regiment set up the CPM-RF to oppose the Central Committee.

Whatever their internal politics, the Communist terrorists have four over-riding objectives:

- To supply all the needs of the terrorist;
- Recruit as many new members;
- Build cells of Communist sympathisers;
- Set up headquarters camps.

The Communists believe it is essential for all terrorists to be self-sufficient. Chin Peng, it is said, now has about 1,600 men under his command. His objective is to create a Min Yuen (Peoples Organization) of about 16,000.

His field for recruits is fairly wide. Those chosen are sent across the border (into Thailand) for training in work camps. Those needing longer training sessions attend camps within Malaysia.

In recent months Malaysian security forces uncovered several such camps equipped with lecture rooms, dormitories, kitchen and parade grounds.

The need for sympathisers is a long-term program. They provide safe houses, act as informants and talent spotters for future recruits.

The exact number of terrorists is anybody's guess. The experts say there are about 500 to 700 armed bandits in est Malaysia. They maintain, too, that if the plan is to bring all the terorists back into West Malaysia within, say, two years, recuperation camps in Thailand would not be necessary.

While using all its resources to ferret the bandits from their jungle lairs, the Government is constantly waging a psychological battle to win the hearts and minds of the terrorists and their sympathisers.

Week after week planes of the Royal Malaysian Air Force fly low over jungle areas dropping leaflets calling on the terrorists to come out and lead useful lives. This is paying dividends. Over the past year more than 500 bandits in Sarawak accepted the Government offer.

Now there is disenchantment within the Communist ranks. Will they surrender in greater numbers; or will they liquidate themselves? The Government is keeping its fingers crossed.

PROVINCIAL COURT

An 18-year-old Metchosin resident whose drinking helped trigger a July 21 incident in which an RCMP constable was attacked, was acquitted on one charge Wednesday in Victoria Provincial Court and fined the maximum on another.

Kenneth George Wall, 487 Dressler, had been charged with being a minor in possession of liquor, consuming liquor in a public place and obstructing Constable William Biden, who suffered a seven-stitch cut in one ear when attacked at Dunsmuir high school in Metchosin.

Judge F. S. Green convicted Wall on the first two counts after a trial Nov. 12 but remanded the third count to Wednesday for judgment.

Testimony had been that Wall openly drank from a bottle of beer shortly after Biden entered the school grounds. He refused to give his name to Biden and other persons then attacked the constable.

Green acquitted Wall on the obstruction count because Wall was not required to answer the demand for identification.

But he said the attack was "a sad commentary on the present status of our young society . . . that they would feel so provoked when they are obviously breaching the law."

Green said the attitude of Wall and the others was "reprehensible and bodes ill" for a society whose hallmark is the rule of law "applied impartially regardless of what the judge may feel."

Wall had no previous record but Green fined him the maximum of $150 on the first count and levied no sentence on the second.

Seven persons were charged in the case. Two were sent to jail, one was fined and put on probation, one was acquitted and two face trials.

In the court section of Judge William Ostler, a plea of guilty was entered by Daniel Makow, 20, of 4075 Metchosin, to a charge of breach of probation.

Makow was found guilty Nov. 8 by Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre after a trial on a charge of obstruction and assault and was one of the two persons jailed in the Biden case. At the time, he was on probation from a 1973 sentence for robbery with violence.

Ostler sentenced Makow to one month in jail to be served after the three-month term is completed.

"If you keep it up, you are going to wreck your mind and your body," Ostler told Stephen Gregory Bell, 17, address not known, who pleaded guilty Tuesday to a Saanich charge of theft of about $255 from his father and a friend.

Bell, who admitted using most of the money to buy marijuana and MDA, received a one-year term of probation.

"There are a lot of very nice people in the world and you should become one of them," said the judge. By "nice people" he meant court probation officer Ed Stanton, who worked late Tuesday to complete a report on Bell for court; the father, who still wanted to help, and the friend, who had offered the youth a job.

□

Legal Aid duty counsel Brian MacKenzie was asked by Ostler to investigate a complaint by Sooke resident Richard Charles Gauthier that he had not been allowed to make a phone call from Victoria jail after his arrest Tuesday in Sooke. Gauthier pleaded guilty to a charge of driving without insurance or a driver's certificate and was fined a total of $500.

Donald Gary Freeborn, 26, of Sooke, chose trial by judge and jury on a charge of possession of cocaine Nov. 20 in Saanich for the purpose of trafficking. Preliminary hearing of the charge was set for March 11.

Eric Michael Bystedt, 17, of 1797 Barrie, was fined $100 by Ostler and put on probation for six months. Bystedt pleaded guilty Nov. 12 to a Victoria charge of attempted theft of a vehicle late Oct. 19. Bystedt told police he had tried to take the vehicle "but couldn't get it started."

In the court section of Judge Harold Alder, a three-month jail term followed by one year of probation were ordered for George Krecul, 18, of 821 Princess. He had been found guilty following a trial on a charge of possession Oct. 22 in Victoria of a known stolen car.

Two persons were jailed by Green following pleas of guilty to separate charges of impaired driving. Joseph Alden Dodge, 47, of 2911 Sooke, stopped Wednesday in Colwood, was jailed 16 days to be served on weekends, banned from driving for six months and instructed to take an impaired driver's course. Tahal Singh Dosanjh, 29, of 3073 Milgrove, stopped Nov. 22 in Victoria, was jailed 20 days to be served on weekends and banned from driving for eight months.

AMATEUR SPORT IN CANADA- WHAT'S WRONG WITH IT?

In the 1972 Munich Olympics, East Germany astounded the world by winning 22 gold medals. Canada, by contrast, has won only four gold medals in the past 18 years. Pot law 'binds' courts

Canadian Press

The discretion of the courts to judge marijuana possession cases on their merits would be restricted by federal legislation introduced Tuesday, Jack Gregory, president of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police said Wednesday.

Gregory, Victoria city police chief, was commenting on Health Minister Marc Lalonde's long-awaited bill on marijuana which would abolish jail sentences for all persons charged with simple possession.

Under the proposed legislation a first offender would be fined a maximum of $500 compared with the existing law which allows a fine up to $1,000 or six months in prison.

Subsequent possession offences would be penalized by a fine of up to $1,000, or a maximum of six months in jail for default.

The proposed legislation "comes as no surprise," Gregory said.

The CACP is opposed to the bill on the grounds that it will substantially diminish the powers of the court to exercise discretion, he said.

Although it has been the "habit" of the courts not to order prison terms for marijuana possession, he said, they have always had the power to do so if deemed necessary.

"What about the repeated offender?" Gregory asked. "Is he to be continually fined or given a suspended sentence?"

Asked if he feels the proposed softening of penalties will lead to greater use of marijuana, Gregory replied he didn't know.

Conflict-of-interest issue simmers in Parliament

OTTAWA (CP) — Conflict of interest, the subject that led to an outburst by Prime Minister Trudeau last Friday, continued to simmer in the Commons Wednesday as opposition MPs asked without success when the subject will be debated.

House Leader Mitchell Sharp accepted an offer made Tuesday by Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield of one of the 25 annually-allotted "opposition days" for the debate. But there still was no indication when this debate would be held.

The conflict-of-interest issue has been before the House for several weeks, beginning with opposition criticism of Health Minister Marc Lalonde for making an official visit to Israel aboard a jet owned by a Canadian distillery.

The flames were fanned when the prime minister's wife Margaret went to Japan to christen a tanker, with all expenses paid by the shipowner.

Last Friday, when Harvie Andre (PC—Calgary Centre) raised an involved conflict-of-interest question relating to divorce, Trudeau understood the question as applying to his own family and was said by other MPs to have called Andre a "son of a bitch." Trudeau stormed from the House.

Trudeau, replying to questions Wednesday from Sinclair Stevens (PC—York-Simcoe), said it is a "worthwhile suggestion" that the committee consider improving the rules. Sinclair had suggested cabinet ministers be obliged to name trustees involved in their holdings and identify other shareholders in companies in which they have holdings.

Meanwhile, RCMP in Toronto have made preliminary inquiries into charges that federal Liberal politicians were bribed by the Seafarers International Union, an RCMP official said Wednesday.

Superintendent Donald Wardrope, head of the force's criminal investigation bureau, said in a telephone interview the branch will see if "any criminal action is involved or anything like that."

Dolphin talk could help the blind

By FRANK MACOMBER
Colonist-Copley Service

The scientist's constant study of the dolphin, the porpoise and other oceangoing mammals could lead someday not only to a new sonar (underwater sound) language for navies but even could help to make the blind more self-dependent.

These perhaps ultimately could be more important spin-offs than the U.S. Navy will acquire in its long search for ways to further streamline its ships and torpedoes, says Dr. Sam H. Ridgway, a marine veterinarian whose work with dolphins, whales and other mammals has attracted worldwide attention.

Ridgway, who spends as much or more time with his mammals than he does with people at the Marine Life Sciences Laboratory, Naval Undersea Centre (NUC) San Diego, Calif., believes science is moving toward an understanding of the dolphin's communication system but still has a stretch of road to go.

"We know a lot but not all that much yet," he said in an interview. "People like Dr. Scott Johnson (an NUC physicist) have progressed to a point where we can speculate that we will be using some of the dolphin's sonar system with a little more help from scientists."

He sees the day when the "dolphinian" sound — a sort of high-pitched but not shrill signal — will help to develop a new communications sytem for the landlocked blind and for deep-sea divers as well.

"What we are learning from the dolphins will be useful, too, in understanding how to design and build better sonar equipment for the Navy," Ridgway adds.

"The dolphin has an excellent sonar. It makes sounds and sends them out to an object, then gets an echo back through its internal ear.

"The dolphin in a sense 'sees' sounds, for even in murky water it can discriminate and identify one fish from another, enabling it to feed on its favorite fish dish and spurn other species."

The Navy's chief mission in dolphin research was to study the hydrodynamics of the dolphin, the porpoise and his ocean cousin, the sea lion. This means applying their abilities to swim, dive deep and swiftly to the improved design of Navy craft or torpedoes.

Yet he sees this as a less encouraging and important payoff than the underwater sound studies.

Much of Ridgway's knowledge of the sea mammals has been built up through his care of them in captivity.

"I try to keep them healthy," he explains, "what we are learning about the mammals gives us a chance to lay up a store of knowledge to pass along to marine museums and acquariums. There is a worldwide interest in mammals today."

While the dolphin, the porpoise and their relatives are surprisingly intelligent — at least on a level with the chimpanzee — they also have some characteristics of humans, according to Ridgway.

"Some work harder than others and are easier to train and get along with," he points out.

Their ability to understand human commands is a reflection of the "mammalian" intelligence, says Ridgway.

"Two porpoises in a tank were separated by a sheet. In front of each were two paddles. One was commanded to hit the left paddle. As he did so the porpoise 'sounded off' to the other porpoises, hidden to him on the other side of the sheet. The second porpoise also hit the left paddle."

The experiment was repeated again and again to make certain the result was no coincidence.

The mammals can be trained to understand words, hand motions, whistles and hydrophones, Dr. Ridgway says.

He believes one of the most valuable programs in terms of saving time, money and even human lives is the Navy's so-called "quick-find" project. In this, California sea lions are equipped with a grappling device and sent into the ocean depths to retrieve sunken equipment. They locate it by means of a sound device attached to the sunken object.

New dual ingredient medicine double effective for hemorrhoid sufferers.

The combination of an anaesthetic to relieve pain and itch quickly, and a soothing cream to help heal sore tissues makes new Hemoraids particularly effective on hemorrhoids.

Diperodon Hydrochloride— the water-soluble anaesthetic — spreads long-lasting relief directly into sore tissues by combining easily with natural, protective body moisture. This helps Hemoraids' smooth cream to effectively coat the irritated area, quickly relieving pain and itch.

The anaesthetic is carried in a soft-textured cream which can be spread over the most sensitive tissues without additional discomfort. And this soothing, cooling cream, in itself, has valuable healing properties. In suppository form, Hemoraids melts quickly and easily after insertion, becoming a gentle, healing cream.

Jungle holds future

Former Japanese army lieutenant Hiroo Onoda who refused to surrender for 29 years after Second World War had ended, dances samba in Sao Paulo with stage dancer. Onoda, 52: "I can look at any jungle and tell you if it's a good jungle . . . but I can't do the s a m e with a woman." Brazil has offered him free land to settle. He's thinking about it.

Man pinned but unhurt

Ralph Foster, 19, of 924 Leslie, Saanich, escaped serious injury when he was pinned between the front of a forklift he was riding and a wooden pillar at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Esquimalt police said.

Police said Foster was fortunate the operator reversed the lift without seriously injuring him, at the education department's warehouse, 878 Viewfield. Foster, a department employee, was x-rayed and released from Victoria General Hospital.

Saanich planning for community wins first nod

Saanich has made its first moves toward community planning and at least one taxpayer association has agreed to "co-operate to the full."

Fred Francis, chairman of Cadboro Bay Ratepayers Association's new planning committee, said Wednesday his group will start meetings with municipal planners in January.

The association will be included in groundwork for the neighborhood's plan, municipal planner Tom Loney told the lands, planning and housing committee Tuesday.

The ratepayers group has recognized the need to plan for orderly change, not just maintaining the status quo, Loney added.

He recommended that the committee postpone action on a controversial rezoning request in the Cadboro Bay area until his department and the CBRA "have an over-all look."

Loney said 28 residents of the McDonald Drive area had petitioned against a request by D'Arcy Bridgman of 2600 McDonald to subdivide his property into two lots just below the minimum lot size.

A change in zoning for Bridgman's lot would mean rezoning surrounding properties as well, Loney told committee.

Mr. Brian Hobbs,
Retail Advertising Manager,
Victoria Press Limited,
P. O. Box 300,
Victoria, B. C.

Dear Mr. Hobbs:

In preparing for our 75th Anniversary celebrations we had occasion to trace the story of our firm through its advertisements in the Colonist and the Times. Our first insertion appeared in the September 6, 1899 issue of the Colonist. The record of the past seventy five years shows that we believe consistent, regular advertising in Victoria's daily newspapers to be one of the most effective ways of reaching our customers.

At this point in our history we take pleasure in noting this close association, and in acknowledging this contribution to our firm's growth and success.

Yours truly,

Ian S. Munday.

Newsprint: another rise

MacMillan Bloedel's $35-per-ton increase in the price of newsprint to its B.C. customers will boost the cost of the product $56 per ton from the levels in July of this year.

MacMillan Bloedel, B.C.'s largest newsprint producer, announced earlier this week the $35 increase will be effective Jan. 1. The increase follows boosts effective last Aug. 1 of $21 per ton. By Jan. 1, domestic newsprint will cost $265 a ton.

An MB spokesman said in Vancouver the increase was necessary because of continually rising costs of raw material and production and the low rate of return on investment in the newsprint segment of the industry.

MB earlier announced a newsprint price increase of $35 per ton to $280 for western U.S. customers.

A Vancouver spokesman for Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. said the firm was studying the situation. Prices for newsprint produced by B.C. Forest Products Ltd. are set at an average of MB and CZ. The fourth producer, B.C.-government-owned Ocean Falls Corp., sells its output offshore at a price based on U.S. west coast price.

Crown Zellerbach initiated the last price increase by raising the per ton cost by $28.50 to $237.50 in the Lower Mainland. It later dropped back to $230 when MB set that level.

White bread, burgers . . .

What you eat may be part of major ills

CP, UP

White bread and other refined foods stripped of much of their cereal fibre or roughage may contribute to the epidemic of non-infective diseases of the heart and intestine, say Canadian nutritionists.

But they caution that more research is needed to substantiate recent British and U.S. research indicating the lack of cereal fibre is related to heart disease caused by narrowing of the arteries.

The research also links cancer of the colon and rectum, second only to lung cancer as a cause of death in the West, to deficiency of cereal fibres.

Dr. J. E. Monagle of Ottawa, a senior clinical nutritionist in the federal health department, said recent scientific research makes it apparent that cereal fibres may be connected with serious intestinal diseases.

His view was supported by Dr. Zak Sabry, a Toronto nutrition consultant and co-ordinator of the large Nutrition Canada survey, and by Roy Harwood of Toronto, a food chemist and chairman of the Bakery Council of Canada's technical and nutrition committee.

The most startling findings were reported recently in the American Medical Association Journal by Dr. Denis Burkitt, an English scientist who, with colleagues, completed a major survey of diseases characteristic of developed and underdeveloped countries and their correlation with dietary habits.

They found such common North American diseases as heart disease caused by narrowing of the arteries, cancer of the colon and rectum, inflammation of the colon, appendicitis and gallstones are rare or non-existent in underdeveloped countries with high-fibre diets.

Meanwhile, a U.S. educator feels hamburgers, French fries and soft drinks may be a major factor in the serious acne outbreak among residents of Indiana's Muncie-Anderson area.

Dr. Richard Bogg, a medical sociology professor at Ball State University, Muncie, has been studying acne vulgaris for two years. He has already studied the complexions of youth in Ireland for comparison with those in the Muncie-Anderson area.

"The people studied in some of the rural areas of Ireland had little acne and virtually no visible scar tissue," Bogg said. "People in the Muncie-Anderson area have more serious acne than any place I have ever visited."

Bogg said the Irish are a fasting people whose food habits are not affected by the gluttony of affluence.

"They don't snack . . . they definitely do not eat as many items that have been deep-fat fried."

He bemoaned his belief that American young people "would rather keep the acne than improve their eating habits."

But he also lists social stress, lack of exercise and climate or weather as contributing to the acne problem.

Rape trial

Witness walked out

WINNIPEG (CP) — A 20-year-old man was acquitted in Manitoba Court Queen's Bench on charges of rape and gross indecency after the 16-year-old complainant refused to testify because she feared a traumatic cross-examination.

The girl, pregnant at the time of the preliminary hearing although not as a result of the alleged rape attempt, said that after an extensive cross-examination at that hearing she had to go to hospital and almost suffered a miscarriage.

The girl, who is still pregnant, was subpoenaed to testify Monday morning but did not appear. A warrant was issued and she was arrested and brought to court Monday afternoon.

Nozick had asked her to describe the incident which occurred after 3 a.m. March 15, after she was picked up hitchhiking in downtown Winnipeg. She was 15 years old then.

When the girl walked without a word of explanation out of the courtroom, Nozick closed the crown's case. Mr. Justice John M. Hunt directed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty.

Nozick told the court the girl was reluctant to go through the experience of cross-examination again.

Nozick said in an earlier interview that defence counsel Hymie Weinstein conducted his cross-examination at the preliminary hearing "as he was allowed to do."

Speaking of defence lawyers, he said, "I wouldn't say they go out of their way to harass witnesses in these type of cases. If they overstep their bounds . . . the trial judge can bring them up on it."

Canadian study shows obesity, high blood pressure hereditary

DALLAS (UPI) — New Canadian research suggests that obesity and high blood pressure — major factors in strokes and heart and kidney diseases — are hereditary and not results of environment.

A study of families with natural and adopted children showed if the parents are obese or have high blood pressure so will the natural children. However, even though the adopted children lived in the home since soon after birth, they showed no correlation to the parents.

"They suggest that the amount of food you offer to a child may not be the key determinant of whether he or she is likely to become overweight," said Dr. Pierre Biron of the University of Montreal.

Biron, who presented the report at the recent American Heart Association conference, said the Montreal area study included 129 natural children and 379 adopted children in 274 families.

"It is concluded that the familial aggregation of blood pressure, whether it is between parent and child, or between children, is almost entirely the result of heredity," Biron said.

He said natural children of parents with high blood pressure also had above-average blood pressure and those of parents with low blood pressure had below-average blood pressure. The same was found for obesity.

Other doctors attending the heart association meeting said that regardless of the cause of high blood pressure, too few persons received proper treatment.

Dr. Jay Cohn of the University of Minnesota medical school said that 23 million U.S. adults had elevated blood pressures, but only half knew it. Of those, only half were receiving treatment and of that group, one-half were treated properly.

"Many physicians are not giving proper therapy," Cohn said. "Many still believe high blood pressure is good for some people, but in fact, people with lower blood pressure tend to live a longer, more normal life.

"We would probably all be better off if our blood pressure were in the low normal range of 90 to 100 over 60 instead of 140 over 90 which we accept as high normal. Even within the normal range it's better to be low than high especially with someone with heart disease already."

Cohn said that lowering high blood pressures would virtually eliminate strokes and reduce chances of heart and kidney diseases.

"Strokes and high blood pressure are very closely correlated," Cohn said. "Reduction of high blood pressure reduces strokes to almost nothing."

A gold bullet

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — When President Ford asked Americans to "bite the bullet" to whip inflation, he probably didn't think of those who want to face the new austerity in style.

A jeweler here did. The store offers a gold-plated bullet on a chain to wear to show "support of President Ford's fight against inflation — a symbol that will unite us in our march against high prices."

Sexual abstinence papal advice

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope Paul VI says abortion is murder and cannot be justified by poverty, illegitimacy or the world population problem.

The 3,500-word declaration cited God's commmandment: "Thou shalt not kill" and said the problem of overpopulation can be solved through sexual absintence or the rhythm system, but never through abortion.

"We proclaim that none of these reasons can ever objectively confer the right to dispose of another's life, even when that life is only at the beginning," the Pope said in a document released on the eve of a French parliamentary debate on a free abortion bill.

He said Christians should try to remove the root causes of abortion by caring for unwed mothers, the poor and the handicapped.

The document was prepared by the sacred congregation for the doctrine of the faith, the Vatican watchdog body over faith and morals, and issued at the Pope's express instructions.

Car in mud proves fatal

Welfare chameleon

CHICAGO (UPI) — "Welfare queen" Lynda Taylor, so the accusation goes, turns from black to Latin to white with the change of a wig.

She is said to have used a maze of aliases, addresses, telephone numbers, deceased husbands and even children — presumable "born" after a hysterectomy — all to fight inflation in a big, illegal way.

Former state public aid director Joel Edelman said hers may prove to be "the most massive case of welfare fraud ever perpetrated in the 50 states."

Bridget Hutchen, the assistant Cook County's attorney prosecuting Lynda's case, said most of the investigators' stories about Mrs. Taylor are probably true.

"But what makes me angry about all the stories is that most of them are not indictable. We simply don't have the facts on all of those things," she said.

State Sen. Donald Moore of Midlothian, Ill., said Mrs. Taylor has bilked the state public aid system of at least $150,000 in the past 12 months "and probably as much in the past three to four years." But Miss Hutchen said only 19 counts of welfare fraud against her are "sure".

Mrs. Taylor was arraigned on those charges Wednesday before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Joseph Powers.

There are nine counts of theft for receipt of welfare checks in 1974 under the name of Connie Walker two counts of theft for cheques received under the name of Lindy Bennett and seven counts of perjury on a denied application for welfare last April in the name of Sandra Brownlee.

"And there's one count of bigamy," Miss Mutchen said. "We know she has at least two living husbands."

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: May I say a word to that outraged hostess who was furious because her friend resented being entertained in her basement, so often referred to as the "recreation room?"

Count me as another one who is sick and tired of being ushered past the living room and taken down to the "recreation room." After spending $7 to have my hair done and $5 on a sitter, I want to know who in the hell they are saving the living room for? Some of the "fancy" furniture up there even has plastic slipcovers.

"Recreation rooms," "family rooms," "dens," etc., are fine and dandy for little kids with sticky fingers or teenagers who want to play music and dance, but when adults are invited to a home they should be entertained in the nicest room in the house — and that's usually the living room. Sign me — Tired of Black Holes of Calcutta.

Dear Cal: The poll is running five to one in your favor. Of course the hostesses who entertain in "Calcutta" wrote to defend themselves, but most women clearly prefer living rooms.

Dear Ann Landers: Your advice to "Second Choice" (the woman who was engaged to marry a man who couldn't go to the bathroom without consulting his mother) was excellent. In my case, I would have been happy with the Number Two spot, but I was FIFTH choice. My husband had three sisters.

I should have caught on when Mama tagged along on our honeymoon. Money was scarce and since we were driving to visit his two sisters, "Why not take Mama along?" You would have thought she was the bride. He waited on her hand and foot the whole time.

From the day we returned from our honeymoon his out-of-town sisters were on the phone constantly. Letters arrived from one or both nearly every day. I never saw such a nutty family. Every vacation had to be spent with them. Finally, I said, "No more." So he went without me.

My mother-in-law passed away a few years ago, but the in-town sister has taken her place. Now she and my husband have to consult each other about everything. I admire a man who is thoughtful and considerate of his mother, but please, Ann, say it again, if he's a Mama's boy, forget it. —Low Lady on the Totem Pole.

Dear Lady: Thanks for the testimony. The questions that flash across my mind when I get letters such as yours are (1) how come you didn't recognize the signs during courtship, and (2) why did you stay?

Dear Ann Landers: I am dumb because I can't play the piano like his sister or cook the way his mother did. You are smart because you live in Chicago and hand out advice. This is what my husband says.

And now, because he thinks you have so many brains, will you please say something in your column about a man who has to have a couple of beers at lunch, a couple of beers with his supper and four or five beers in the evening while he reads the paper asd watches TV?

Anyone who looks at him can see he has a weight problem. He doesn't realize, however, that he also has a drinking problem. When I mentioned this to him last night he said, "Beer has so little alcohol in it that a person would have to drink a tankful to get drunk."

In the meantime the kids don't even try to talk to him after his fourth beer because he makes no sense.

I hope you will print my letter and say something about this. —Beer Belly's Wife

Dear Wife: Many people try to fool themselves (and others) into believing they have no drinking problem because they drink "only beer" or "only wine," or they never touch liquor until five o'clock. All these people may be alcoholics.

Your husband is a beer drunk if he makes no sense after the fourth. The sooner he admits it and does something about it the better for him and his family. I suggest A.A. — but don't nag him. It only works when the drunk goes on his own.

I kicked my husband's foot as he snored in a chair. "Know what I read in the paper today? Vidal Sassoon said that men's hair is going toward a 'marvelous, curly Greek boy look with the new un-permanent.' "

He blinked his eyes and rearranged his body in the chair. "What's that again? The Greeks have permanent damage from a typhoon?"

"You aren't listening to me. You never listen to me. I'm talking about the new men's hair styles. This year, your hair is supposed to look like a 'marvelous, curly Greek boy'."

"What was the un-haircut look?"

"You never had it," I said. "Fred had it."

"You mean where he parted his hair in the back of his head, combed two 18-inch strands of hair forward and arranged them in a semi-circle over his forehead?"

"What's the matter with that?"

"Dwayne had an un-haircut."

"Doesn't it bother you at all that you and Robert Haldeman are the only two men walking around in North America today who have ears?"

"No. To me, if you're going to get a haircut, it should look like you got a haircut."

"That's the kind of a remark I'd expect from a man who didn't shave one Saturday and called himself a Hippie. You've been mad at barber shops ever since they cancelled their subscription to the Police Gazette."

"That's not true. I just personally believe that Joe Garagiola and I are ahead of our time with the un-hair look."

"Does that mean you aren't going to look like a 'marvelous curly Greek boy' this year?"

With a Greek comedy on a tragic body you don't know whether to laugh or cry.

CALORIE-CONSCIOUS COOKING

By Barbara Gibbons

Barley is one of those forgotten foods. Americans don't pay it much mind, except for the occasional homemade soup fan who tosses a handful into the bubbling pot.

Barley is a grain, and when cooked, it looks like giant rice and tastes a little like spaghetti. Since barley contains 43 fewer calories per cupful than spaghetti, we thought it might make an interesting "Italian" side dish for dieters. Here's our creation:

BARLEY ITALIANO

16-ounce can Italian tomatoes, including liquid.
2 cups water
½ cup pearl barley
1 onion, chopped
¼ teaspoon oregano
½ teaspoon garlic salt
dash of red pepper
3 tablespoons grated extra sharp Romano cheese

Combine all ingredients in a nonstick two quart saucepan. Cover and simmer over low heat, stirring occasionally, for one hour or more, until liquid is evaporated and barley is tender. Add water if needed. Sprinkle with cheese and serve. Makes six servings, 94 calories each.

SPANISH BARLEY

Like Spanish rice? Follow preceding recipe, but omit cheese. Add one chopped green pepper, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard and ¼ teaspoon cumin. Serves six, 83 calories each.

BEEF AND BARLEY SOUP

2-pound soup bone (½ pound meat)
2 quarts water
1½ tablespoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup chopped fresh parsley
1 cup sliced carrots
1 cup sliced onions
1 cup sliced celery
16-ounce can tomatoes
4 tablespoons medium pearl barley

Brown the soup bone under your broiler, turning to brown evenly. Cut the meat into cubes. Combine bone, meat, water, salt, pepper and parsley in a soup pot. Cover and simmer one hour. Remove bone. Chill soup, skim off all fat that rises to surface. Add barley and vegetables. Cook an additional 1½ hours until meat and barley are tender. Makes about eight servings, 97 calories.

No sugar in diet boosted vigor

MONTREAL (CP) — A report released by the University of Montreal says there is a link between decreased physical ability and candy consumption.

The study, by the department of nutrition and dietetics, found that a small quantity of sugar, or sugar substitute, depresses the body's metabolism and hinders physical performance and resistance.

The year-long study, initiated by the university's faculties of medicine and physical education, was made with an amateur hockey team split into groups.

A control group was left free to consume candy and chocolate bars, while the rest of the team was split into a sugar-free group and a test group exposed to increasing sugar-bearing diets over an eight-month period.

Researchers said "the sugar-free group's physical performance improved by 63 per cent over the first few months of the experiment."

The groups on regular sugar and increasing sugar-bearing diets "saw their ability to play good hockey drop to the level of incompetency as more and more gum and chocolate was added to their diet.

The report stated each youth on the sugar bearing diet "had a severely weakened metabolism and was physically inferior to every youth from the rest of the team."

Scientists explained "digestion of the sugar or sugar substitutes contained in the candy robbed the body of its energy at the time where the game called for maximum ability.

In concluding, scientists expressed hope that advertisers "aiming their pitch at children would take in account this effect of candy on young athletes and stop making use of sport as a charismatic context for chocolate or chewing-gum consumption."

Youths mark 1973 uprising

With UN force

Seven Victorians serve in Egypt

Seven reservists from Victoria are serving with the Canadian contingent, United Nations Emergency Force, in the Middle East.

Four of them are from HMCS Malahat and three are militiamen, one each from headquarters Militia Area Pacific, the Victoria Militia Service battalion, and the 5th (B.C.) Field Battery, RCA.

The Victoria reservists, like their counterparts from coast to coast, volunteered to serve for periods of up to six months with the UN force. They work alongside regular members of the Canadian Forces and personnel from other United Nations countries.

Canada's commitment is to provide ogistics support for the UN Emergency Force, organized following the truce which ended the 1973 Yom Kippur war.

One of the first Victorians to reach the Middle East was Cpl. Paul Paone of the Victoria Militia Service battalion. Paone, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Paone, 53 Regina Ave., arrived in Cairo by Canadian Forces Boeing 707 June 4. He has been employed with the 73rd Canadian Service Battalion since his arrival.

After working at Camp Shams in Cairo and at Ismailia Airfield Camp, at Ismailia, 80 miles northeast of Cairo, Paone moved to Camp Bolivar on the Golan Heights on the border between Israel and Syria in September, and worked as a dispatcher before he returned to Ismalia early in October.

Cpl. M. E. (Mickey) Graham of headquarters, Militia Area Pacific, has been working with the Administration Company's transport section since he went to Egypt June 4. He has held a variety of jobs, including administration, dispatching, and driving. He is serving at Ismailia Airfield Camp, but his duties take him to the Golan Heights as well. Graham's parents, Major and Mrs. Thomas Graham, live at 9940 Bessredge Place in Sidney.

The first Victoria naval reservist to arrive in Cairo was Leading Seaman Christopher Preston of HMCS Malahat. A communicator, he has been employed in the signals units at Camp Shams and at Ismailia Airfield Camp. Preston was attending Camosun College before volunteering for the Middle East. He is the son of Lt.-Cmdr. and Mrs. A. J. Preston, 2373 Zela.

Petty Officer Gordon Butterfield, of HMCS Malahat, and Corporal Leonard Woollven of the 5th (B.C.) Field Battery, RCA, went to the Middle East in September.

Butterfield is the first reservist to serve with the Canadian contingent at the sergeant level. Previously, reserve sergeants were required to drop one rank as a condition of acceptance. A communicator, Butterfield has been given responsibility for the operation of all telephone switchboards ae Ismailia Airfield Camp and at UNEF Headquarters in Ismailia.

Woollven has been employed in the supply section of the 73rd Canadian Service Battalion since arriving at Ismailia Airfield Camp. He is working in the quartermaster's stores as well as the company office. Woollven's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Woollven, live at 3122 Metchosin Road.

Only naval reserve officer to serve in the Middle East is Lt.-Cmdr. John Walter of HMCS Malahat. He served in September and October with the Canadian Contingent United Nations Emergency Force Middle East information services. He lives with his wife, Vanetia, and family at 1424 Fairfield Road, Victoria.

Three killed in car crash

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) —RCMP have identified three persons killed in a three-car accident on Mount Seymour Parkway as Wendy May Foster, 21, Norman Martin Howe, 26, and Leslie John Arthur Gabel, 25, all of Vancouver.

Chamber asked to push air link

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce members were asked Wednesday to petition Ottawa in support of an application to the Canadian Transport Commission by Air West to inaugurate harbor-to-harbor service to Seattle by April 1975.

The chamber's transportation committee chairman, Ron Campion told a director's meeting that opposition to Air West's proposal by a competitive carrier would delay a decision by the federal commission's air transport committee.

Campion said an Air West official told him any delay past February would mean the service could not be started until after the tourist season.

Air West expects to carry about 50,000 persons between Seattle and Victoria from April to September.

Canadian Press

A new attitude must be developed towards the building and maintenance of highways with more thought given to the intergration of transportation with land use, Highways Minister Graham Lea said Wednesday.

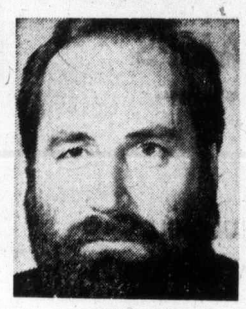
Speaking to a conference of provincial highways department foremen, in Burnaby Lea said the government must seek a greater return on its investment in highways by encouraging public transit and trucking.

He said highways should be widened and improved but for rapid transit or for trucking and only for the private automobile when all other public transit methods have been explored.

"The private automobile has already taken too large a share of the land and resources of our people," Lea said.

The highways department's efforts to date have been largely to accommodate the increased numbers of private automobiles and to encourage their use, he added.

"We have played an important part in the grand design of Detroit. In so doing, to a large extent, we may have jeopardized the grand design of British Columbia."



Lea
... grand design

Lea said there have been benefits from the increased mobility of the private citizen but these benefits must be weighed against other costs such as the loss of valley land, pollution, the waste of fossil fuels.

A copy of Lea's speech was released in advance of delivery.

Father wants charge, gets nod

A Vancouver man who went to court to demand a charge in his daughter's death won a victory Wednesday when the B.C. government, which had in effect dropped the case, took over his private prosecution.

The government made the surprise move after Vancouver Provincial Court Judge Les Bewley decided to allow Harvey McNeil of Vancouver to charge John Frank Sanucci, 29, with manslaughter in the death of McNeil's daughter, divorced artist Mary Margaret Jones, 33.

A manslaughter warrant will be drawn up today against Sanucci and served on him later this week in Victoria, where he is to appear in provincial court this morning on a marijuana possession charge. He may make his first appearance in a Vancouver court Friday.

The announcement in Bewley's court was made by senior crown prosecutor Mac Norris and marked the government's second reversal in the controversial case, which began July 12 when Mrs. Jones was found dead in a cabin at Roberts Creek northwest of Vancouver.

The death occurred in "a high-class commune" where Sanucci, also known as John Anthony Sherwood, was a visitor. He was charged July 28 with manslaughter and freed on $5,000 bail until Oct. 30.

Sanucci failed to appear that morning in the main court in the area, at Gibsons, as the crown stayed the charge, in effect dropping it. A warrant charging him with failing to appear was issued to preserve the jurisdiction of the court.

On the night of Oct. 30, a coroner's jury at Gibsons blamed Sanucci for the death of Mrs. Jones. District coroner John Harvey recommended the stay be lifted but the B.C. attorney-general's department confirmed the stay, citing insufficient evidence.

A Greater Victoria drug squad raid Nov. 16 on a home at 320 Beach resulted in a marijuana possession charge against Sanucci and police learned he was wanted for a 1972 prison escape at Lompoc, Calif., where he was serving six years for smuggling narcotics.

McNeil appeared Monday before Bewley to swear a private charge of manslaughter against Sanucci, citing evidence from the inquest. He reappeared Tuesday to repeat the charge of failing to appear, which the government said had also been stayed.

In making his final ruling, Bewley said he had been mistakenly informed by various sources that the crown had entered a court stay of the lesser charge.

The judge said he would allow the private prosecution because his own studies of the Criminal Code indicated Parliament had not intended that only attorneys-general could stay charges.

He criticized the use of court stays in general and in the Sanucci case in particular, saying they should be used sparingly and "only when it is clear manifest injustice will result."

Between 1966 and 1973, said Bewley, more than half of the stays entered on criminal charges in Canada occurred in B.C. If the crown felt evidence in the Sanucci case was insufficient, he said, it should have asked the Gibsons court to withdraw it.

Bewley said the weight of evidence should be judged by courts and "not an officer of the crown . . . if crown law officers and attorneys-general are to have the legally unfettered right to decide whether the evidence is sufficient to support a conviction, of what use are judges and juries or courts of appeal?"

The only elaboration of the government's decision to take over the case was given by a spokesman who said it means the government is not prepared to contest the right of a citizen or a court to bring a charge to trial after the crown has refused to do so.

Sanucci's deportation was ordered last week after an immigration department inquiry in Victoria on grounds he overstayed his three-month time in 1972 and gave false and misleading information.

Bewley has instructed the immigration department not to act on Sanucci's deportation or release until the renewed charge is dealt with.

McNeil's campaign forestalled original plans to return Sanucci to the U.S. this week. Part of that plan was withdrawal of the marijuana charge in Victoria but sources said Wednesday the crown will go ahead with that charge now that it appears Sanucci will stay in Canada for some time.

His stay will last at least until completion of a preliminary hearing of the manslaughter charge and could continue until completion of a later trial and then for sentence.

B.C. leading to improve farmers' income

British Columbia has taken the lead among Canadian provinces in providing a positive program to improve the economic position of farmers, Agriculture Minister David Stupich said in Victoria Wednesday.

The minister told the annual convention of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture at the Empress that delegations from other provinces travelled to B.C. to learn at firsthand recent agricultural developments here.

He was referring specifically to the Farm Income Assurance Act which calculates farmers' wages at $4 an hour.

He praised farmers for their collective agreement in accepting the wage calculation saying it indicated, "good faith and a sense of responsibility." He also said it represented the true socialist spirit, that in spite of farmers' varying investments, "all are prepared to accept equality."

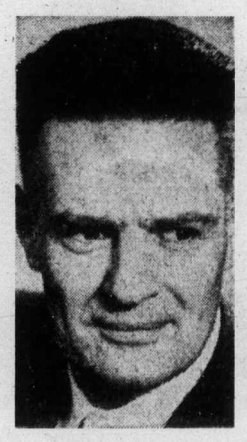
Another program which interests Quebec, he said, are the acts which enable farmers to borrow money for their businesses at rates not exceeding 8½ per cent.

Stupich said loans and guarantees total almost $13 million for this year with an additional $1.76 million in credit loans.

In addition the provincial government has spent $4.5 million for land-clearing and development in the province, compared with less than $500,000 spent by the previous administration, he said.

"It is essential that everyone understands and appreciates agricultural production is now more than ever vital to our survival."

He added he hopes other provinces will become involved in programs such as those in B.C. to encourage the federal government to participate. Dick Stocks, federation manager, said farmers in the province will continue to bargain for higher wages than the $4 hour rate stated in the Farm Income Assurance Act.



Stupich
. . . positive program

"Farmers' wages are very low when carpenters, plumbers, electricians and others enjoy hourly rates approximating $10," he said.

He also said acute labor problems arose this year because of a shortage of seasonal workers in certain parts of the province.

"One of the most significant steps forward has been the organization of farm-labor pools across Canada."

B.C. has two labor pools, located at Armstrong and Abbotsford, and another is being established at Duncan.

Socred think tank seeks new solutions

Canadian Press

British Columbia's Social Credit party is aiming to restructure almost all of its policies "from the grass-roots level up," Art Weeks, assistant to Socred leader William Bennett said Wednesday.

Weeks described the Social Credit policy convention, to be held Friday and Saturday in Vancouver, as the most important for the party since its 20 years in power ended with the NDP's victory in the 1972 provincial election.

Approximately 1,500 delegates are expected to attend and debate numerous resolutions involving 16 areas of public policy.

Resolutions chairman Robert Bonner said the convention will deal with recommendations from the September workshop at Harrison Hot Springs.

Bonner said top priority will be given four resolutions concerned with the current B.C. housing crisis.

A copy of the draft resolutions states that the party will advocate financial assistance for municipalities to provide services to lots for housing.

The party also intends to encourage the forest industry to supply low-cost lumber for housing needs by cutting the stumpage rates until the current housing shortage has been overcome.

Expansion and refinement of incentive programs, such as the homeowner grant and home-acquisition grant initiated by the former government, are among housing resolutions.

The party will also advocate more financial aid to local governments through the sharing of provincial growth revenues, such as income taxes, corporation taxes, and resource revenues.

Abolition of the B.C. Land Commission Act is among the convention's land proposals.

In forestry, a resolution to repeal all legislation allowing the government to participate directly in the private sector will be put to the delegates. A further proposal will be made to return all corporations partially or wholly-owned by the government to private companies. Other resolutions will include new policies on education, mining, marketing boards, labor, transportation, health, and agriculture.

Free enterprisers are getting the short end of the stick, the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce claims.

Directors agreed Wednesday to consider at their next meeting a proposal to study the feasibility of a public schools course on the aims and objectives and histroy of the free enterprise business concerns.

In a report to the directors, Robert Harvey said: "It would appear the public is being inundated lately with anti-business propaganda."

Chairman of the chamber's education and youth committee cited the recent opening in Victoria of a provincial consumer services office "to handle complaints for alleged unfair practices by the business community" as detrimental to the image of free emterprise.

Other threats cited by Harvey, were pressuring of the province by the B.C. Labor Council for a course in the schools system on the trade union movement in Canada as well as Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young's wish for consumer education studies in schools.

Harvey said the chamber should consider financing, if necessary, the development of such a course by recognized experts and educators.

Discord jars symphony directors

Underhill gave business pressures as his reason, but Irwin and Adaskin expressed strong disagreement with the management of symphony affairs.

The board discussed plans to raise funds to meet an expected defficit this season of about $30,000.

The board decided to write to Toronto and Calgary symphonies to seek their advice on the use of professional fund-raisers.

Two escapers plead guilty

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — Gary William London, 28, and John William Marlow, 17, pleaded guilty in provincial court to escaping from the Haney correctional unit. They were remanded to Dec. 19 for pre-sentence report.

Seeing is believing

It isn't often that crane service operators indulge poetic streaks, but in this case one of the owner's of the Eugene, Ore., Hall Crane Service, Stan Parson's son, seized the paint brush when this new crane began to resemble — at least to him — a giraffe. And giraffe's without eyes wouldn't do at all, so he painted a largish eye on his steel-and-cables giraffe. Passersby often miss this eye-in-the-sky, but when they take a second look, a third one, accompanied with a smile, is sure to follow.

Marijuana: A glimpse through the smoke

By BOB CORBETT
Colonist - Copley Service

All of the pilots performed poorly. They veered off course, made wrong turns, changed altitudes wildly, stalled their aircraft, got lost and even ran out of gas.

More than half of them committed errors that would have resulted in tragic plane crashes.

The pilots had one experience in common. Before they took off, they all smoked a single "joint" of marijuana.

Luckily, all of this occurrred in a research program at the University of California at San Diego using only simulated flying conditions. No one died.

The UCSD experiment is one of the latest in a series of investigations that amount to what can be called a third, more rational and more disturbing look at marijuana.

The first look was a period in which marijuana was considered a total evil, an addictive drug that led its unsuspecting victim inevitably into the vicious world of hard narcotics, like heroin.

All of this proved to be false, but it ushered in a second phase of marijuana, in which smoking a joint or two became a harmless and even socially acceptable thing to do. A recent report of the National Commission on Marijuana; Phase III, however, indicated that more than 24 million Americans are now using or have used marijuana.

The recent studies in Marijuana; Phase III, however, indicate that this benign view may be as equally wrong as its old, hard-line predecessor.

The Reports, although admittedly inconclusive and often controversial, indicate that marijuana may be implicated in:

- Irreversible brain damage.
- Chromosomal defects affecting health.
- Reducing the body's immune or defensive system's ability to ward off disease.
- Altering hormonal activity to produce impotence or sterility.
- Sudden and detrimental behavioral changes.
- And, almost certainly, severe damage to the bronchial tree and lungs.

One of the factors that make the UCSD experiment important is that it involves only a single, normal dose of marijuana. Other tests often entailed heavy concentrations of the drug and are suspect for that reason.

The experiment is being conducted by a team headed by Dr. David S. Janowsky, director of psychiatric services at UCSD's University Hospital.

The UCSD test involved seven volunteer pilots of varying degrees of certification. All were run through a standard ATC-510 instrument flight simulator to establish their baseline performance.

The pilots were then given what Janowsky called a "social dose" of marijuana containing about six milligrams of tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), the major psychoactive ingredient of marijuana, or a placebo amount involving almost no THC. Eventually, all the pilots smoked the marijuana during the double-blind test in which neither they nor the researchers knew who was getting the heavy or light dose.

The results, according to Janowsky, were quite apparent. The performance levels of all the pilots, when judged against their baseline proficiency, dropped dramatically after they smoked the loaded quantity of marijuana.

Both the number of minor and major errors committed by the pilots increased significantly, he said, and more than half of the pilots made mistakes which under normal flying conditions could have been "disastrous."

However, Janowsky indicated, all the test really shows is that pilots should not smoke marijuana just before they take off.

He still regards marijuana as a relatively "safe" drug.

Certainly, he said, it is "much safer than alcohol, barbiturates, narcotics and amphetamines."

All of these drugs, he said, have their positive and negative sides. Marijuana, he said, should be considered in the same light.

Marijuana, he said, undoubtedly has its hazards. It is capable of causing negative feelings — anxiety, depression and paranoia. However, he added, it may also prove to be a beneficial drug under certain circumstances.

In fact, Janowsky said, he and his fellow researchers are now in the process of preparing other tests that might demonstrate beneficial uses of marijuana — say as a nighttime relaxant for a harried business executive who otherwise might be in danger of having a heart attack.

However he wouldn't recommend the use of marijuana by minors. "It can't help them face life," Janowsky said.

Murderers married in prison

CRANSTON, R.I. (UPI) — Two convicted murderers have been married Monday night at the adult correctional institution in the first inmate marriage in Rhode Island, it was learned Wednesday.

Walter C. Jordan, 30, and Linda Kane, 29, had been seeking permission to marry for more than a year.

Corrections officials confirmed the woman was pregnant, the unborn child conceived while both were minimum security prisoners.

Donald Taylor, acting director of corrections, said he had not heard of such a marriage happening anywhere in the U.S.

The bride, a divorce convicted of the 1971 shooting of her 4-year-old daughter and the wounding of two other children, was given away by corrections officer George Fortier. Inmate Ronald Parenteau served as best man for Jordan, who is serving a 37-year term for the 1968 murder of a 73-year-old woman. Parenteau's wife Claire, not a prisoner, was matron of honor.

Prices going up in quiet islands

By LYNDE McCORMICK
Colonist-Monitor News Service

Unspoiled, uncrowded, unhurried, unknown — and cheap. That's always been the consensus of vacationers who knew the Caymans. After a recent visit, I would agree, but not completely. The islands are becoming known and the prices are going up — and up.

However, they remain unspoiled, having absorbed a growing tourist industry rather than vice versa. There are no high-rise hotels, or blaring nightclubs (and none planned), no radio, no TV and no tourists - everywhere-you-look. Just sun, sand, water, and a wonderfully snail-paced life-style.

But if you're looking for a completely secluded Caribbean hideaway, it may already be too late.

In 1964, the Cayman Islands received about 4,000 tourists. In 1973, the number jumped to 50,000, according to government statistics. And estimates for the 1974 season indicate continuing growth. Fortunately the islands can easily accommodate the expansion. The relatively few hotels are filled to the brim during the winter season. But during the off-season you can walk for three miles on a brilliantly white beach in the middle of the day without seeing a soul.

Columbus in 1503 first sighted and dubbed them "Las Tortugas" because of the many green sea turtles found there. Following settlers eventually exterminated the reptiles, but in 1968, the first and only commercial sea turtle farm in the world was established on Grand Cayman. Products made from the 100,000-plus animals that live there, some weighing more than 1,000 pounds, constitute the country's chief export.

The Caymans grow increasingly attractive to vacationers, largely due to absence of the political, sometimes violent, tensions surfacing elsewhere in the Caribbean. The government vigorously advertises full employment, no poverty, and no race problem.

The lack of a radical income difference between visitor and resident, plus a population that is 20 per cent black, 20 per cent white, and 60 per cent mixed removes much potential resentment. Political and racial dissent can be found, but one must dig deep beneath the surface to find it.

Progress is extracting its pound of flesh, though. Litter, attributed mostly to the residents, seems to grow side by side with the dense vegetation, and junked cars smear what little there is in the way of sight-seeing.

Tourists often leave their marks under water. Divers pick coral and collect seashells with little regard for the ocean environment. One guesthouse owner complained that a guest had "collected three boxes of coral — and then just left them behind."

Since the rise in tourism, the country has had to impose a season on lobster fishing. One native fisherman commented that "three years ago, lobsters were everywhere. You could bring up six with one dive. Now, even during the season, you're lucky to find one a month."

The big drawback to the Caymans is the prices. Tourist brochures bill the place as a lot of paradise for a little money, but don't believe it. Eating dinner at a tourist restaurant stands to cost at least (with the emphasis on "least") $20 for two. The native-patronized restaurants are considerably cheaper, but the fare is simple and not oriented toward foreign taste. In season, hotel rates are typically Caribbean sky-high, and a 5 per cent government tax plus 10 or 15 per cent gratuity tacked onto the bill, food included, puts an unexpected strain on the wallet.

Tahiti claims beery record

PAPEETE, Tahiti (AP) — Tahitians boast of being the biggest beer drinkers per capita on earth. Brewing is the largest industry in the islands after tourism. Two breweries operate around the clock to quench the thirsts of the pacific island population of only 120,000.

Suit undrapes Miss World

LONDON (UPI) — Helen Morgan of Wales, the first unmarried mother to win the title of Miss World, said Wednesday she was resigning the honor because she did not want to tarnish her tinsel crown in a forthcoming divorce suit.

Organizers of the beauty conference offered the title to Miss South Africa who said she would consider it.

"Miss Morgan phoned me a few minutes ago and said all she wanted to do was go to bed and get some sleep," said contest chief Julia Morley. "Obviously her decision is irrevocable."

The Welsh brunette had said Tuesday she was bowing out because she feared she would be named the other woman in a pending divorce suit.

Mrs. Morley immediately telephoned 19-year-old Anneline Kriel (Miss South Africa) the runner-up in the televised contest Friday night which picked Miss Morgan for the title and said she was prepared to discuss taking it over.

Miss Morgan, 22, yas the second successive Miss World who was fired or quit. Last year Marjorie Wallace of the United States was ousted by the organizers because of scandalous reports about her private life.

Controversy over Miss Morgan erupted almost as soon as she won the title over entrants from 56 other countries when it was disclosed she had an 18-month-old illegitimate son.

The Sun newspaper said cabaret dancer Linda Lovegrove, would cite Miss Morgan as "the other woman" in a court action to divorce her husband, a nightclub owner.

Hallucinogenic mouse scorns sweet poison

MEQUON, Wis. (UPI) — The Mequon police dispatcher was eating his lunch when he noticed a mouse saunter across the floor.

Investigating, he found out what made this particular mouse so bold. It had been sampling marijuana, LSD and amphetamines from the storeroom where drugs and other contraband were kept.

Police chief Thomas Buntrock said "it was a bold son of a gun. It went downstairs where our dispatcher was eating lunch. It trotted confidently across the room.

"The next time," Buntrock said, "it bypassed the marijuana, sampled a sugar cube with LSD and chewed on two different capsules of amphetamines."

He said his men had put out "some most delicious poison," but the mouse scorned it. Police said Monday night they had caught the mouse and killed it.

News nonsense was my goal when I asked last week for examples of media muffs, but most of the reaction to date has been political.

Take Pat Jordon, the former cabinet member and still Socred from North Okanagan. I'm told she has gained unique fame in the Legislature which such dandies as "You pulled the table from under them, Mr. Minister" . . . and "now we've heard the milk of human kindness from the words of public works" . . . and "this is so incredible it's almost unbelievable."

Those are from the Colonist's Jim Hume and a Duncan reader reports newsmen Andy Stephen started a Capital Comment program by asking Mrs. Jordon: "Do you think the province is in better shape now the NDP is in power or when Social Credit was the government?" That's so incredible it's almost unbelievable.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION. Wednesday's answer — If Pat Neal was the girl in her 1948 movie debut John Loves Mary, John was portrayed by Ronald Reagan, believe it or not. The much more modern romance John and Mary starred Dustin Hoffman and Mia Farrow while it was Stan Freberg who recorded John and Marcia. As in "Marcia Marcia Marcia Marcia . . ."

Today's question — A U.S.-born soprano who had two movie careers lived from 1902 to 1947, had trouble with overweight and died in a plane crash. Name her and the 1953 Kathryn Grayson movie about her. The answer Friday.

"I'm watching 'VERY Little House on the Prairie'."

Regional board stalls plan for development

NANAIMO — The Vancouver Island Real Estate Board has succeeded in its efforts to postpone a decision on an area master plan.

The Nanaimo Region Board Tuesday shelved for two months its plan for development of the Parksville-Qualicum area.

The plan, which was prepared by Robert Slobodian of Nanaimo last summer, was scheduled for adoption at the board's meeting this week.

It sets out development restrictions and land use in the areas of Parksville, French Creek, Qualicum and the Coombs-Hilliers Errington districts.

However, the real estate board has presented the regional directors with a report critical of several aspects of the Slobodian study.

Commissioned by the real estate board, the report was made by Dr. Stanley Hamilton and David Baxter, both of Vancouver.

The report claims that in the regional plan a proposal for acquisition of beach frontage was "tantamount to expropriation without compensation."

The report also objected to several other parts of the study, including restrictions on mobile home park development, calling the proposals "totally illogical."

Regional directors have sent their plan back to the regional planning committee and asked for additional information and public opinion before taking the matter further.

The real estate board also suggested that regional directors should adopt the plan only as guidelines and not lock itself into recommendations by adopting the bylaw.

The matter is scheduled to come up again in about two months.

Hunt resumes for 5 crewmen

The search for five crewmen missing after they abandoned a United States fishing vessel in Queen Charlotte Sound was resumed Wednesday.

A Ministry of Transport spokesman at Victoria said the search was resumed after the Coast Guard vessel Ready brought in the fishing vessel's 10-foot liferaft which was found abandoned with other debris off Aristazabal Island, about 120 miles north of Cape Scott at the north end of Vancouver Island.

The spokesman said there were indications that food and medical supplies had been removed from the raft and there was a possibility that survivors from the Yaquina, of Bellingham, are somewhere in the many islands 70 miles north of Vancouver Island.

He said a search and rescue Cariboo aircraft was hunting for the missing men in the islands.

The vessel was skippered by Jim Mathews of Anacortes, Wash. Also on board were Mathews' stepson Jim MacDonald and John Lampshere, also of Anacortes, and Peter Allain of Bellingham and Steve Hardy of Edmonds, Wash.

A distress signal from the Yaquina early Friday morning indicated her position was somewhere in the islands 70 miles north of Vancouver Island when she was abandoned. The search for the missing men was suspended Monday because of Pacific storms.

Victim aid by April

The Insurace Corp. Of British Columbia hopes by next April to have prepared a rehabilitation program for persons injured in traffic accidents.

The corporation's planning and research department is making an assessment of existing rehabilitation facilities in B.C. to find out what types of additional facilites may be needed.

Patterson said the Syracuse, N.Y., team will move to Quebec City; the Rochester, N.Y., team to Indianapolis, Ind.; and the Toronto, team to Long Island, New York.

CFL players re-elect Reed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Veteran fullback George Reed was re-elected President of the Canadian Football League Players Association at a meeting here Wednesday.

Reed, the record-breaking ground gainer of the Saskatchewan Roughriders, said the meeting was a general working session to reorganize certain parts of the association. He said there also was discussion on the league pension plan and the election of officers.

Another Proell

VIENNA (Reuter) — Evi Proell, 16, joined her sister, world champion Annemarie Proell-Moser, on the 13-member Austrian national ski team named to compete in this year's World Cup races.

Argonaut defectors anxious to return

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League, who early this year saw some of their players move to the new World Football League, now faces a return rush from the financiall-troubled WFL.

"We've had many calls from WFL players interested in having a tryout with us next season," says Argo owner Bill Hodgson.

Argo general-manager John Barrow said: "I have recieved about a half-dozen calls from kids in the WFL who were not being paid. Some of them have never recieved a pay cheque.

"Some of the calls have been from players who did not like our contracts in the first place. They said they would go to the WFL and we did not discourage them. Now, some of them want to come back. We again will not discourage them."

Among those trying to come back is defensive end Bruce Burgey who left Argos to go to Portland Storm, a club that still owes its players most of their salaries.

"The whole thing has been and still is a nightmare," said Bergey who has had to dip into his savings to pay daily expenses.

"Our contract was supposed to be guaranteed by the league (WFL) but the league has no money."

Bergey said he knew he was taking a gamble when he went to Portland and now that it has failed he advises any CFL player who is thinking of going to the WFL to "forget it."

"If things continue in the WFL the way they are, I can guarantee that telephone lines to the CFL will be very busy the next few months."

The playful California sea otter is making an amazing comeback from near-extinction. Less than 50 years ago, the otters — reduced by years of slaughter — numbered less than 40; now about 1,800 of the prankish little mammals live in the bobbing kelp beds in a refuge area in the 170-mile Pacific Ocean coastal stretch between Santa Cruz and Avila.

Conservationists, of course, consider the gradual increase of the bewhiskered sea animals a success story because it took an all-out effort by the government to save them.

But sports and commercial fishermen are not so sure. Abalone — an important commercial fish product, is also one of the sleek brown mammal's favorite foods.

In fact, fishermen found the competition so tough that they decided that the formerly endangered otter is now a threat to the shellfish industry — a threat that must be controlled. When their protests met with no comment from the government, fishermen reacted sometimes by shooting or clubbing the animals.

California State Fish and Game biologists Paul W. Wild and Jack A. Ames have given five years of study to the fisherman-otter dilemma. This year they completed a report that suggests that the 1,800 otters now snacking their way through abalone and other shellfish are indeed an economic threat to commercial fish resources. Messrs. Wild and Ames therefore recommend:

● Protection and management of a healthy sea otter population restricted within the geographical limits from Moss Landing to Morro Bay.

Sea otter coming back

● Tagging and ecological studies.

● "Continuing scientific study — in order to learn more about the otter and its habits — and a continually updated program of management."

Wild, who has become a top expert on sea otters, admits, "I love them, but I think we need to begin a sound management program in order to keep them in control."

But keeping the otters in bounds is not a decision that the State of California can make alone. The decision of what to do next belongs to the Department of Interior in Washington, D.C., because the Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972 gave the federal government control of the mammals.

The multiplication of the otter hasn't been all bad, however. Conservationists point out that, since the return of the otter, California's kelp beds are thriving. Kelp (also a commercial product of importance) benefits by the otter's presence because otters eat both abalones and sea urchins, two mollusks that eat kelp.

That's why some scientists, like Dr. John S. Pearse of the biology department of the Univeristy of California at Santa Cruz, view the otter population as beneficial to the balance of nature.

Dr. Pearse agrees with the conclusion of the Fish and Game study in part: "I think there is little question that commercial abalone fishing is impractical in areas with established sea otter populations; sea otters do reduce accessible abalone numbers to very low levels."

But, he comes to a different conclusion: "The presence of sea otters certainly does not endanger the total existence of abalones, probably quite the contrary.

"Moreover, I am not convinced that restricting sea otter populations will in any way assure the continuation of a viable commercial or sport abalone industry. Almost all of the data of the Fish and Game indicate a steady decline in abalone stocks even in areas without sea otters."

Dr. Pearse feels that a more practical way to insure a continuing abalone industry would be to move in the direction of "farming" abalones rather than controlling their predators.

Obviously, something has to give. But otter supporters hope that "management" will not mean harsh measures against this appealing animal, which has only just struggled its way back from the brink of extinction.

This is the Canadian vodka that went to Russia

In the interests of sorting out the confusion, may we point out there is only one vodka that's imported from Russia. Despite the many Russian-sounding names—Smirnoff or Bolshoi or Nikolai or Rimski—all these are Canadian vodkas. And so is ours, but then we've never felt you needed a Russian-sounding name to make a great vodka.

Will success spoil busy Singapore?

By EDWARD NEILAN
Colonist-Copley News Service

BACKGROUND

Is the Singapore boom bubble about to burst?

Will success spoil the tight little island of 2.2 million hardworking souls living on 226 square miles of tropical real estate?

Discipline — some call it political repression — may be the reason that Singapore has been able to continue its sparkling growth performance to date while others in Asia and around the world have faltered in the face of the oil-money crisis.

In growth terms, for the first six months of 1974, Singapore comes in as the world champion.

During the first half of the year, the growth rate for Singapore was 6.8 per cent. Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew insists that were it not for the fact that his island-nation is so dependent on the performance of the rich countries, Singapore's growth would have been around 12 per cent.

In contrast to Singpaore's growth performance, the track records of other nations in the inflation-wracked first half of the year were pretty sad:

United States, minus 2.75 per cent; Japan, minus 6.5 per cent; United Kingdom, minus 6 per cent; West Germany, minus 2 per cent; France, plus 4.7 per cent.

In Lee's National Day address in August, he told Singaporeans that although the peoples of the world were more or less in the same economic wagon, there could be individual differences if a population disciplined itself and practiced fiscal frugality.

Lee gave no indication that his government would budge from its advocacy of hard work and austerity and its opposition to subsidies to prop up sectors of the economy.

"To subsidize consumption is to pour your money down a bottomless pit," Lee said. "Once the government raises taxes to subsidize and sell rice cheaply, it embarks on an exercise in self-deception in deficit budgeting that must end up in bankruptcy."

Lee, who has been the target of criticism for authoritarian rule, said Singapore could not afford to approach its economic game plan any other way.

He shrugged off outside criticism:

"People, particularly foreigners in their newspapers, say we are an authoritarian lot because we are prepared to discipline ourselves. There is a style about writing articles as there is with clothes.

"The West sets the style. Every year they change to make you buy new clothes, throw away all your good old ones.

"They make the tie broader. They make the lapels broader. They make the trousers flared. They make the boys wear high heels with platform soles.

"That is the consumer society. Buy now, pay later. If you can't pay, never mind — borrow. Keep on borrowing, keep on paying."

Lee said such behaviour should be given serious thought before a developing country tries to emulate the West.

Singapore's very smallness has meant that by good planning it can bend with the economic problems of the world without breaking. But its economy is tied so closely to the industrialized world that many economists are predicting a severe downturn over the next few months.

One very severe threat forthcoming is the reconsideration in London of Britain's defense commitments in Singapore. In all, there are only 3,000 British servicemen in Singapore today. There is one ship, the frigate HMS Mermaid, based there and a five-vessel combat flotilla visits for several months during each year.

But if economies back home force London to slice its presence in Singapore completely, there will be new security, as well as economic, considerations for Lee and his colleagues.

Meanwhile, amid reports of a sinking local stock market and increasingly sluggish real estate and banking performance that are duling Singapore's shine, Lee continues to act as cheerleaders: "There is one fundamental quality we have, which nothing can change, and that is the verve, the vitality, the drive in our people."

Rapists compound crimes

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Rapists are compounding their crime with murder at an alarming rate, RCMP Staff Sergeant Fred Bodnaruk told a public meeting this week.

He said the number of rapes in the British Columbia Lower Mainland have increased 10 per cent since last year, but there has been an "alarming increase of violence and murder along with the rapes."

"Years back it was mostly just rape, but more and more we're finding that victims of rapes are suffering tremendous physical harm at the hands of the rapist," S. Sgt. Bodnaruk said.

He cited at least seven rape-murders in B.C. during the last two years.

S. Sgt. Bodnaruk said courts are too easy on bail requirements, citing one case where an accused rapist committed to other rapes while awaiting trial.

M.V. Chesnut's Garden notes

While browsing through a foreign seed catalogue the other day, I was attracted by an exceptionally fine color photograph of a new strain of Mignonette, and I got to wondering while we so seldom see this fine and easy plant growing in home gardens hereabouts.

True, the flowers are not particularly showy, but their fragrance is exquisite, and a small patch blooming beneath an open bedroom window can make one's nights a perfumed delight.

Mignonette has an unusually romantic history. It is a native of Egypt, and during Napoleon's Egyptian campaign, the emperior came across a patch of the flowers growing wild near his headquarters tent, and was so entranced by their sweet scent that he ordered seeds collected.

These were packaged carefully and sent home by fast frigate to the Empress Josephine to grow in her garden at Malmaison, which was famous internationally for its collection of strange and rare plants from all over the world.

Admiral Nelson's blockade was remarkably effective, however, and the French frigate was intercepted and captured by a British man-of-war. When the mails were examined for intelligence purposes, the package of seeds came to light.

Fortunately, the English sea captain was not only a chivalrous man, but an ardent amateur horticulturist as well, so the seeds were released and sent on their way to the empress by a neutral schooner.

And if that British officer was typical of most keen gardeners, I'd bet a Cadillac to a cookie that a tiny pinch of the mystery seeds was snaffled for his own use.

Josephine was charmed by the flowers, and not only established open-air beds of them at Malmaison, but set the fashion of growing Mignonette as a houseplant for the sake of its perfume.

From there, the idea spread to England, and at one time whole streets in London were lined with window boxes filled with Mignonette to combat the stenches of the city.

Mignonette is of the easiest possible culture, and most cases of failure which have come to my attention are due to too much loving care.

The plants resent being moved and transplanted and coddled, and the usual technique of starting the seeds indoors on a sunny windowsill is all wrong for this tough-minded species.

I find I can get a good stand of seedlings simply by scattering the seeds on the soil surface fairly early in the season, while the soil is still cool.

It is best if you don't even dig over the plot first, for another "must" in the culture of Mignonette is really firm soil.

Just rake the ground lightly and scatter the seeds, without any covering at all. Give a light, misty watering, then rig up something to give a bit of temporary shade to keep the surface from drying out.

One simple method is to lay damp sacks over the sown patch, but these must be removed as soon as the seedlings come through, which should take from five to seven days.

Given this treatment, the seedlings should sprout as thickly as fleas on a dog's back, and these must be thinned out very early in life before the baby plants can become "drawn" or distorted through overcrowding.

Leave a full 12 inches between plants, for the modern kinds make quite a bushy plant, standing 10 to 15 inches tall. Red Monarch and Bismarck are the best varieties.

The thinnigs needn's be wasted, for there is no reason why you shouldn't follow the Empress Josephine's example and pot up a few as houseplants.

A good plan is to grow three plants in a five-inch pot, pinching them back as required to make sturdy, shapely speciments.

Jack Smith

I am exhilarated to learn that my recent speculations on why it takes women so long to say goodbye, and why they do it in the open doorway, have been sent to the communications research centre at Purdue University for scientific study.

This news comes from Robert D. Kully, professor of speech communication at Cal State Los Angeles, who not only sent my modest work to Prof. Gustav W. Friedrich, at Purdue, but also sent me a copy of Prof. Friedrich's paper, The Rhetoric of Goodbye: Verbal and Nonverbal correlatives of Human Leavetaking.

The paper is 17 pages long, much of it in small type, and is naturally couched in scientific language, which could hardly be avoided, I suppose, since it is signed not only by Prof. Friedrich but also by Profs. Knapp, Hart and Shulman.

It is a fascinating study, this dissection of that common ritual of leavetaking. But I'm as fascinated by its language as by its findings.

The four professors cite Goffman's suggestion that "greetings mark a transition to increased access, and farewells to a state of decreased access," (I think this means that when you say hello to a person you expect to be with him, and when you say goodbye you don't.)

"Perhaps," the professors observe, "this anticipation of lack of access is one of the factors that contributes to some of the difficulty that many of us have experienced in taking leave." (It's hard to say goodbye because you aren't going to be seeing the person for a while.)

Thus, they point out, "many of the behaviors associated with leavetaking are attempts to say, 'Yes, communicative access will be denied us for a while, but you should not perceive my leavetaking as threatening the end of our relationship."

But at cocktail parties, they observe, people don't say goodbye or farewell, or any of the terms that suggest a long period of inaccessibility.

"Cocktail parties provide a setting in which the probability of multiple encounters with the same person are generally increased. Thus, when short-term inaccessibility if anticpated, one finds various abbreviated forms of leavetaking being used — e.g., 'Pardon me,' or a 'knowing' touch on the arm."

I don't know. At the cocktail parties I go to the only way to escape from a one-on-one situation is to say, "My God, your drink is empty," snatch his or her glass, and make for the bar, where one is safe until the next multiple encounter.

The professors have evidently been to one of those dreadful farewell parties where the guest of honor is got rid of at last, usually in no condition to depart, and then comes back to get his gloves or his wife, or whatever it is he's forgotten. They call these dismal gatherings "failed departures."

I recall a perfect example of the failed departure. It was years ago, a joyous wedding. The bride and bridegroom, after cake and champagne and many kisses and farewells, at last left in the bridegroom's father's Hudson, after which the guests at once settled into serious partying.

Twenty minutes later, as the newlyweds raced south, the bride cried, "Oh, golly — I forgot my purse!" Having no wish to take part in a failed departure, the bridegroom wouldn't have gone back, but the bride had the honeymoon money in her purse.

I remember that incident vividly, having been the bridegroom.

★ ★ ★

Fascinating as I found the Purdue report, it made me glad that Shakespeare was a poet, not a behavioral scientist, or we might have had this:

Juliet: Good nigh, good night!

Romeo: Yes, communicative access will be denied us for a while, but you should not perceive my leavetaking as threatening the end of our relationship."

It is no reflection on the work of Prof. Friedrich and his friends that it goes, instead, like this:

"Juliet: Good night, good night-

James Bacon's Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD — Asked someone who worked on Rooster Cogburn, who produced and directed the movie.

"Who else?" he said. "Duke."

It figures that Wayne would even direct Katharine Hepburn.

Duke continues to be very chummy with his attractive young secretary, Pat Stacy. She comes up to about Duke's belt buckle. Duke has always liked smaller women.

"Women scare the hell out of me," Duke once told me.

For the first time in memory, Duke is involved with a girl who is not Latin. There's a good reason for that. Duke hates the song, Granada, and after three Latin wives, every mariachi band in Latin America always serenaded him with it.

Jack Cassidy says that Clint Eastwood is one of the best directors he's ever worked for — although The Eiger Sanction almost knocked Jack out of the box.

He was bicycling daily from the MGM Grand Hotel in Las Vegas where he and his wife Shirley Jones were headlining to Zion National Park and Monument Valley, Utah, to work for Clint.

"Many of the best directors I have worked for are actors," says Jack. "There's Clint, George C. Scott and don't forget that Elia Kazan was once an actor.

"Clint has a brilliant instinct for how to use the resources of his actors. He doesn't show you what to do. He knows what you can do and gets you to do it-the very best you can.

"He also has one of the greatest instincts for exciting shots since Hitchcock."

Amazingly, every actor who works for Clint says the same thing about his directing ability. The kid's got it.

Got the Christmas catalogue from Sakowski, a store in Houston. Some unusual gift ideas. For instance, for $3,000 you can get lessons in conversation personally from Truman Capote.

Would you pay $3,000 to be able to talk like Capote? You could be a big hit at the hairdressers' ball.

For $4,325, you can get a day's skiing lesson from Jean Claude Kelly but you have to travel to Val d'Isere, France, for the lesson.

Most expensive gift is lessons in swimming from Mark Spitz at $115,000 with $50,000 of the fee going to the Mark Spitz-Cedars Sinai hospital foundation.

These last for three days at Larry's Rodeo School and include room and board. All for $230.

★ ★ ★

Lots of mail on the origin of the showbusiness term top Banana. First letter that came in was from Jack Gregg of the San Diego Evening Tribune. He writes:

"It was originally 'First Banana' and comes from an old vaudeville routine between two Dutchmen. Probably Weber and Fields who did a dutch act.

"Phil Silvers tells all about it in his book, The Laughs on Me.

Guess I'll have to read Phil's book. He should know because he was a top banana in burlesque and, of course, starred in the Broadway and movie versions of the hit musical, Top Banana.

Questions have many sides

Stuart Rosenberg

Life is getting so complex that it is good to learn how to simplify. But beware of confusing that with oversimplification as the answer to our human dilemmas.

Over-simplification expresses itself in times of emotional need as a debate-oriented psychology that makes us think of our human problems as two-sided — yes or no; right or wrong — rather than many-sided.

As a result, we frequently tell people to choose sides — rather than to learn how to explore possibilities.

It is such crisp certitude that there are only two sides to any question (and we'd better learn how to make up our minds to find the right side) that too often confuses instead of helps.

We become impatient with people — ourselves and others — who seem incapable of rapidly making up their minds, no matter how complex the problem may be.

Ask yourself how often you suggested to those who may have come to you for advice, that they "had better make up their minds very soon" and act decisively, if they want to achieve some "peace of mind."

We might be doing our friends a better turn if we were to recommend instead, that they give themselves more time to get the feel of their problems, to learn to seek out more information before jumping to conclusions, and that they keep their decision tentative enough, until they can try them out for consequence.

Such advice to our friends can help them in their time of trouble: they will not later be embarassed or lose their self-confidence, or seek vainly to save their face — if they should need to change their stance, or alter their decisions.

To be sure, permanent indecisiveness is a neurotic way of living. Neurotic indecision, however — the built-in incapacity to come to any conclusion whatever — is not to be confused with its healthy opposite.

That consists of a rational power to take trivial decisions in stride and to postpone judgment, or to organize "working hypotheses" that will see us through, until we are intellectually and emotionally ready to come up with an answer that suits our needs.

There is nothing wrong in our characteh, nor does it show us up to be moral weaklings, if we let it be known that we have areas of ignorance which we have to overcome; or if we are committed to a patient application of our intelligence to get at the root of our problems.

Those who think that heroes have answers ought to look around life's battlegrounds with greater keenness.

They will see the battered wreckage of many so called heroic efforts that could have used a little more time, a little more patience, and a lot more intelligent use of rational powers.

Take your time before you jump. And take your mind — not only your heart — with you.

Gift goes swimmingly

Gift from Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen's four children, new heated swimming pool at Government House received first try-out Wednesday morning from vice-regal representative, who likes to swim twice daily for physical fitness. Pool, 44 by 25 feet, located on south side of Government House, has still to get finishing touches.

Oh, how the money Rolls in

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Rolls-Royce dealer Charles Schmitt didn't notice the recession Wednesday — he sold one man seven of the classic cars for more than $1 million.

Among the seven were the Queen Juliana Rolls-Royce Phantom, worth $280,000, and a 1950 Rolls valued at $200,000.

Schmitt would not disclose the identity of the buyer, but did say the man was in the coal business in Kentucky and planned to start a museum exhibiting all the 78 special versions of the prestigious automobile. He said the same purchaser had previously bought Rolls-Royces worth $1.6 million.

To protest land inaction

Chief warns blockades may be erected again

Highways across the province could be closed in a repetition of last summer's blockade by Cache Creek Indians, an Osoyoos Indian chief warned Wednesday.

Chief Jim Stelkia said in Victoria the Osoyoos band, and at least 21 other bands, were "fed-up with the reasonable approach. Our strategy is to close off all roads across British Columbia, with all people affected."

However, Philip Paul, land claims director of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, now meeting in Victoria, said Stelkia's comments did not represent union policy.

But, he added, the chiefs will be discussing strategy today and will not be ruling out forms of direct action such as highway blockades.

Stelkia
. . . fed up

Paul said many Indian people did not recognize 24 land surrenders, which took about 24,000 acres of Indian land out of Indian control between 1912 and 1916.

The union has been negotiating with the provinces to have the surrendered lands restored to Indian ownership, Paul said, but the negotiations have been unsuccesful.

"We approached (Premier) Barrett," Stelkia said," but he wouldn't see us in the Parliament buildings. We were turned away to civil servants who know nothing."

Paul said "regular channels of communication haven't worked," and the union, while it will be discussing different approaches, is "forced to look at direct action."

Next move up to provinces

Trudeau won't ease oil tax demands

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, stepping directly into the growing resources dispute with the provinces, refused Wednesday to back down an inch on his government's controversial taxation policies.

In a major Commons speech, he defended Ottawa's plan to charge income tax on royalties paid by resource companies to the provinces. He rejected Alberta and Saskatchewan claims that Ottawa is trying to take control of resources.

Both Ottawa and the provinces must co-operate to ensure that oil, natural gas and mineral companies can survive, he said. But Ottawa had already modified its position and the next move was up to the provinces.

He said the federal government must prevent the total oil and gas revenue windfalls from going to one or two provinces. All Canadians had a right to share in the wealth, he argued.

He also said proposed changes in the formula for calculating federal equalization payment to poorer provinces was within the terms of a general agreement reached last March when he met with the provincial premiers.

Despite claims to the contrary by Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney, he said, the changes suggested by Finance Minister John Turner in his Nov. 18 budget were in keeping with the March understanding. In fact, Saskatchewan, one of seven poorer provinces receiving equalization payments, would be slightly better off than under the March agreement.

He also disputed claims by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed that there was no advance warning of

U.S. senators urge threat to pipelines

WASHINGTON (CP) — Seventeen United States senators suggested Wednesday that the U.S. could either interfere with or tax Canadian oil supplies carried in pipelines across American territory unless Canada removed its tax on crude-oil exports to the United States.

However, a state department legal expert said anonymously that interference with the oil or unreasonable taxation on it would violate international trade laws and would probably be illegal under American law as well.

The suggestion came in a letter to State Secretary Henry Kissinger, signed by 17 senators who represent a broad spectrum of opinion in the U.S. upper house.

"Certainly, it is our hope that such a drastic measure will never be adopted by the United States," they wrote.

But they called the pipelines which cross U.S. territory "bargaining chips" and called on Kissinger "to enter into immediate negotiations with the Canadian government in an effort to eliminate this tax."

Kissinger is in Peking at the moment and there was no immediate comment from the state department.

The letter said:

"As you know, the United States has several bargaining chips that could be used to induce the Canadians to remove this tax.

"For example, most of the oil consumed by Canada east of Manitoba is moved in pipelines passing through the U.S. Roughly 400,000 barrels a day of Canadian crude flows through the U.S. to Ontario via the Interprovincial-Lakehead Pipeline.

"In addition, Canadian refineries near Montreal receive more than 500,000 barrels a day of imported crude oil via a pipeline from Portland, Me., to Montreal.

B.C. may set up tax retaliation

Provincial crown corporation tax procedures will be reviewed by the British Columbia government after Premier Barrett returns from China, Development Minister Gary Lauk said Wednesday.

Lauk denounced the federal government's intention to tax provincial crown corporations to ensure Ottawa collects its "appropriate fair share" of revenue generated by rising oil and gas prices.

The provincial government must look at retaliatory steps to be taken, he said, adding that B.C. "is watching closely" any moves by the Alberta government.

The minister described the federal government's proposal to tax crown corporations as "an outrageous approach."

The federal budget tabled Nov. 18 imposed federal income tax on royalties that resource companies pay to the provinces. They were previously tax deductible.

Confidence vote tomorrow

Turkey totters near collapse

ANKARA (UPI) — Turkey faced a deep crisis Wednesday with the immiment fall of its government, the devaluation of its currency and the threat of President Makarios' return to Cyprus.

The Republican People's Party doomed the new government of Premier Sadi Irmak by announcing the party would vote against it in Friday's confidence vote in the national assembly, thus reopening a 70-day cabinet crisis.

Irmak's fall would reopen a government crisis that began Sept. 18 with the collapse of a coalition under former Premier Bulent Ecevit, who has been trying to force early elections, apparently in hope of cashing in on the popularity he won by sending Turkish troops to Cyprus in July.

The news that Makarios had started home to Cyprus provoked dire predictions.

Makarios was ousted in July by a Greek-led coup. He started home from London Wednesday, with a first stop in Athens.

Foreign Minister Melih Esenbel told a questioner that "the Turkish government will take the necessary measures" if the lives of Turkish Cypriots are threatened.

"Archbishop Makarios has always played the leading role during the incidents of violence and disagreements in Cyprus," Esenbel said.

Alpaslan Turkes, the Cyprus-born leader of Turkey's Nationalist Action party, told newsmen: "If Makarios returns to Cyprus, the Turkish armed forces must launch a third offensive and capture the entire island.'"

In an unrelated development, Turkey's central bank announced a devaluation of the Turkish lira against nine West European currencies to keep it linked to the sagging dollar. The value of the German mark went up from 5.25 to 5.65 lira and that of the Swiss franc from 4.77 to 5.21.

Physicist arrested

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet physicist Andrei Tverdokhlebov, 34, secretary of the Soviet branch of Amnesty International and a founding member of the Soviet human rights committee, was taken into custody and his apartment searched, sources reported.

Ship fined after spill

COQUITLAM (CP) — The Liberian freighter Ogden Clipper was convicted in provincial court of polluting Burrard Inlet and fined $7,500. The court was told that 10,000 gallons of heavy bunker oil was spilled Jan. 26 while the vessel was loading fuel. A spokesman for the crown said the ship's owners will be faced with an $86,000 bill for cleaning up the spill.

Selassie won't die

Execution denied

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — Ethiopia's military government denied reports Wednesday that it had passed a death sentence against former Emperor Haile Selassie, the African monarch whose stand against fascism before the Second World War moved the world.

The military regime, whose leaders ousted the 82-year-old Selassie, said he was being held under guard in Addis Ababa for his safety.

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Wednesday he had sent a letter to the military government in Ethiopia protesting the recent execution of 60 former military and civilian officials.

'Alberta oil richer by $100 million'

SASKATOON (CP) — The Alberta oil and gas industry will increase its revenue this year by about $100 million despite federal budget stipulations making provincial royalties a non-deductible tax item, John Richards, independent MLA for Saskatoon University, said Wednesday.

He said he obtained his information from a confidential Alberta government report on the effects of federal Finance Minister John Turner's budget on the province's petroleum resource industry.

He sai dthe report stated the oil industry would still be left with a rate of return of between 9 and 10 per cent despite th ecombined impact of Alberta's royalty provisions and the federal budget.

"Since the Nov. 18 budget reduced by one-quarter the proposed federal income tax on oil and gas, the next profit to Alberta oil and gas industry after deducting federal income tax and provincial royalties of $2.62 per barrel is $1.6 billion, upfrom $1.5 billion in 1973."

He said the report also discussed contingency plans under which the Alberta government intended to reduce its provincial taxation of the industry by $150 million to $200 million annually to ease the tax burden.

Ottawa's con game 'sickening'

TORONTO (UPI) — Conservative leader Robert Stanfield ripped into the federal government Wednesday night for deceiving Alberta and Saskatchewan in a "con game" on oil pricing and taxation.

"This may seem like slick gamesmanship to the wheelers and dealers in the Trudeau cabinet," he said, "but to me it is one hell of a sickening way to see confederation being abused . . .

Help makes trip possible

● People Tree will help fund. Page 9.

She won't be going home alone this Christmas.

Her boy, Roddy.

And someone special is waiting for them.

Roddy's grandmother.

It's been six years since Roddy's mother has seen her.

This Christmas Roddy will meet the woman, who until this last summer, was never mentioned.

"We fought over how I was living my life," she says to explain the six dark years.

"That's all over and nothing is going to keep us apart this Christmas."

The trip is going to cost money. The kind of money a waitress in Victoria — with a son and no one else — has trouble finding, particularly at Christmas.

The Colonist 500 fund can help make their trip a bit easier. Last year donations to the fund totalled $27,000.

Hijackings and killings not our aim, says PLO

CAIRO (UPI) — A Palestinian leader said Wednesday the Palestine Liberation Organization was against plane hijackings and the killing of innocent people, including Israeli civilians, "be they on aircraft or in their homes."

PLO leader Salah Khalaf made the statement a few hours after the PLO in Beirut announced the arrest of 26 persons suspected of involvement in the hijacking of a British Airways VC-10 and said that it will put them on trial in an open court.

Khalaf, better known by the code name Abu Iyad, said the arrests were made on his orders. He said he hoped the hijacking of the British jetliner to Tunis "will be the last incident of its kind in our time."

Abu Iyad, who is the No. 2 leader of the Fatah guerrilla organization after PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, said "some Arab countries" were primarily to blame for the Tunis hijeck because they have been aiding and financing dissenters from the PLO.

Trudeau won't ease plan

the federal plan to charge income tax on royalties.

Stanfield has said Alberta and Saskatchewan would not have agreed in March to limit the price of domestic crude oil to $6.50 a barrel if they had known what would happen.

Trudeau, quoting from a letter he sent to Premier Blakeney and Premier Lougheed before the agreement was reached, said he warned the provinces in clear, straightforward language that new federal taxes would be imposed.

He said his letter expressed concern that new royalties' schedules planned by the provinces would cut the federal government out of its share of rising oil and gas revenue.

No decision had been made at the time on what federal tax increases would be made, he said. But the letter warned that action would be taken.

He said the decision to charge income tax on royalties was the only solution available to the government. The move was announced originally in Turner's defeated May 6 budget and reinstated in last week's new budget.

If the provinces had retained their old royalties schedules, no federal action would have been required. Rising oil and gas prices would have increased the federal share to 13 per cent from 6 per cent and the government would have been satisfied.

Instead, the federal share would have remained at 6 per cent under the higher royalties and the provincial share would have risen to 31 per cent from about 22 per cent.

Canadians generally helped pay to develop the oil industry by buying western crude oil during the 1960s at a price higher than what they would have paid for imported oil, he said.

U.S. senators

"For this reason, the U.S. is in a good position to curtail, restrict, or tax shipments of crude oil over U.S. soil for use in Canadian

The senators said it was "not our purpose to urge retaliation against Canada."

"It is our purpose, however, to call this matter to your attention and urge the state department to assume a more forceful and purposeful negotiating posture with respect to Canada . . .

"The recent announcement by the Canadian government of a speed-up in their export curtailment schedule makes your attention to U.S.-Canadian relations even more imperative."

The letter was drafted at the instigation of Democratic Senator Lee Metcalf of Montana and Republican Senator Bill Brock of Tennessee, a Senate informant said.

The two were said to have decided on the action after hearing testimony at a Senate subcommittee last week about a White House program to equalize oil prices, eliminating disparities between imported and domestic oil, oil reserves and new discoveries.

The informant, who asked not to be identified, said the hearings were told that Canadian oil, with its $5.20-a-barrel export tax, is probably the most expensive in the world and the import of Canadian crude at current prices would complicate the equalization program.

Treasury Secretary William Simon said soon after the tax was imposed that he sympathized with the Canadian action, although he felt the tax was set too high.

The senators' mention of the pipelines carrying Canada-bound crude across U.S. territory comes only three weeks after a meeting in Ottawa to discuss the security of such oil supplies from interference or unfair taxation.

NOTES TO YOU . . .

Having enjoyed every minute of a life-long love affair with comic strips, I feel reasonably qualified to make comment on the artistic endeavors of Graham Harrop, the young Victorian whose new strip, The Gullibles, is now appearing every day on the editorial page of this journal.

To start with, Graham Harrop is using a different approach — he is basing his strip on political satire as well as humor and I think the approach is not only refreshing, but long overdue.

Harrop has something else going for him — he is an extremely fine artist, has a distinct feel for his characters. Believe me when I say the artist bit is a dying art. Many of today's comic strip authors fall far short of excellence in their drawing, which is a pity. Harrop's style is distinctive, clear, humorous. I'm glad he's on our team and I think his strip could become one of the best features in The Daily Colonist . . .

BOB WRIGHT, the Marina fella, sends along a pretty good clipping about the newspaper business culled from the London Sunday Telegraph.

"A newspaper or magazine is not the place to go to see people actually earning a living, though journalists like to pretend they never stop sweating over a hot typewriter. It is much more like a brothel — short rushed bouts of really rather enjoyable activity, interspersed with long, lazy stretches of gossip, boasting, flirtation, thinking, telephoning, strolling about the corridors, sitting on corners of desks, planning to start everything tomorrow.

"Each of the inmates has a little specialty to please the customers. The highest paid ones perform only by appointment, the poorest take on everything and anybody. The editors are like madams — soothing, flattering, disciplining their naughty, temperamental staff but rarely obliged to satisfy the clients personally between the printed sheets."

And to think I've been working all these years in houses of ill repute without knowing it . . .

WELL, WE HAVE HAD our little exercise in justification. The B.C. Legislature has been adjourned after a couple of weeks and our premier and some of his members were off in China for a good part of the sitting.

But really, did you expect more? This was nothing more than window dressing in order to justify the doubling of salaries for members. You will recall that the premier stated the increased payments would be necessary because the house would be sitting twice a year instead of the traditional once.

Can there be any doubt now, in light of this quickie session, that the two-session concept was nothing more than an excuse for the pay hikes? Just another example of our leaders going along on the assumption the voters are gullible sheep anyway . . .

THE FOOD SHORTAGE has been given much play of late, but I think the Canadian Churchman, the national newspaper of the Anglican Church of Canada, summed it up best in a not-so-long-ago editorial.

"Last year the world's population increased by 75 million to 3.6 billion, but food production went down one per cent as did the world's fish catch.

"Global grain reserves are a mere 29 million tons, just enough to feed 750 million Chinese for a few months.While we worry about the price of bacon, most people in the world worry about the next meal—not what the menu will be, but whether it will be.

"The causes of world-wide shortages are many — drought, failure of wheat crops, continuing shortages, floods and a decline in the dollar. But there are a couple of causes not often mentioned in affluent Canada—sheer gluttony and selfishness. For example, the increasing demand in the western world for meat means an increasing demand for animal food, converting agricultural produce to animal protein. It's the most inefficient way for humans to get protein. One acre of land gives 10 times as much vegetable protein as animal protein and it's just as nutritious.

"How long will the wretched of the earth allow us to moan about the high cost of living in Canada while those unknown unmourned poor die that we never hear about on the evening news.

"Food is not produced in our western world to feed people. It is produced for profit. The farmer fears that if he grows everything he can, he will produce a glut on the market that will depress prices. There must be a radical change — food must be grown to feed all people, not for the profits made."

All true, but unfortuneatly, all too naive and altruistic as well. In other words, don't go blue in the face waiting for it to happen.

Your good health

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When a person chews food, don't the cheek glands secrete a fluid to help break down the food? If one constantly chews gum, doesn't this "fool" the glands?

On an empty stomach couldn't this gland fluid cause a stomach ache? This is my own theory. —D.J.D.

An ingenious theory — but wrong.

The parotid glands in the cheek produce ptyalin, an enzyme that starts digestion of starch, converting it into dextrose and maltose.

Chewing gum promotes secretion of saliva but it hardly fools the glands. If you want to try an experiment, put a small morsel of bread in your mouth. It will gradually disintegrate and finally disappear even without any chewing, although of course the bread will break up more rapidly if you chew it.

Chewing gum wouldn't produce a stomach ache. If it did — there'd be a lot of stomach aches.

Defaulting borrowers lose driver's licence

Drivers who fail to repay money borrowed to buy Autoplan insurance will have their driver's licences lifted next year.

In one of the final debates of the fall session, the legislature agreed Tuesday to give the superintendent of motor vehicles the right to ban from driving any motorist who has borrowed money under the government-Royal Bank plan but has failed to make repayment.

But Provincial Secretary Ernest Hall told the legislature that the law will not be retroactive.

"No action will be taken against 1974-75 offenders," Hall said. 'The Royal Bank will have to take its own bumbles on that."

The bank, in co-operation with the provincial government, agreed a year ago to loan insurance funds to any motorists without credit questions.

David Anderson (L—Victoria) told the house the figured the bank had lost close to $750,000 on the deal, which involved approximately five per cent of all B.C. drivers.

Anderson fought a losing battle to have the new law (Section 10 of omnibus Bill 178) held in abeyance at least until the spring.

He claimed the bank had made its offer to the government in the hopes of attracting more government business its way and it should now be left alone to collect its own debts without the aid of a club from the government.

"They came in with the offer of money and frankly hoped to attract 40 per cent of autoplan insurance fund business," Anderson said. "They got 5 per cent. And the 5 per cent they got were the bad risks who couldn't raise the money anywhere else.

"The 62,000 people who took out Royal Bank loans were the people least able to pay the money back," Anderson said.

Transport Minister Robert Strachan said the same basic rules applied under private insurance. "If you didn't pay your insurance, you lost the right to drive "Strachan said.

After lengthy debate the section was approved.

These tomatoes are really hot

This year's fall crop of hothouse tomatoes is the best in 15 years, according to Saanich grower Jack Arnaud.

Arnaud, of 6432 Patricia Bay Highway, explained in an interview Monday the fall crop was planted at the beginning of August and harvesting began last month.

As the season progressed, he said, it became obvious this crop would be "exceptionally good."

"Our average yield this season is 20 per cent higher than last", he said, and he added the quality is also greatly improved.

He said the tomato plants benefited from cloudless fall weather.

Genoa Bay

Water to stay clean

By CRAIG MERIDITH
Colonist Correspondent

NORTH COWICHAN —Genoa Bay residents received some good news Wednesday from the provinicial government. The department of land services director W. R. Redel announced that in the next two weeks all log sorting in Genoa Bay would be halted.

The residents of the scenic bay in the municipality of North Cowichan have been concerned that the log sorting was polluting the bay. Ed Armstrong, area fisheries officer, had reinforced their concern earlier this month when he said the sorting process creates a woodfibre sediment that destroys the cycle which feeds the marine life in the bay.

Loretta King, a resident of the area who met with MLA Robert Strachan over the issue, said Wednesday she received a call from the land services director confirming that all log sorting would be curtailed.

Regional board stalls plan for development

NANAIMO — The Vancouver Island Real Estate Board has succeeded in its efforts to postpone a decision on an area master plan.

The Nanaimo Region Board Tuesday shelved for two months its plan for development of the Parksville-Qualicum area.

The plan, which was prepared by Robert Slobodian of Nanaimo last summer, was scheduled for adoption at the board's meeting this week.

It sets out development restrictions and land use in the areas of Parksville, French Creek, Qualicum and the Coombs-Hilliers Errington districts.

However, the real estate board has presented the regional directors with a report critical of several aspects of the Slobodian study.

Commissioned by the real estate board, the report was made by Dr. Stanley Hamilton and David Baxter, both of Vancouver.

The report claims that in the regional plan a proposal for acquisition of beach frontage was "tantamount to expropriation without compensation."

The report also objected to several other parts of the study, including restrictions on mobile home park development, calling the proposals "totally illogical."

Regional directors have sent their plan back to the regional planning committee and asked for additional information and public opinion before taking the matter further.

The real estate board also suggested that regional directors should adopt the plan only as guidelines and not lock itself into recommendations by adopting the bylaw.

The matter is scheduled to come up again in about two months.

Jury recommends drag race strip

LAKE COWICHAN — A corner's jury at an inquest in the death of a 16-year-old drag race spectator near Lake Cowichan Aug. 24, has recommended that an organized drag strip be made available in the Cowichan Valley.

Eric Ross Pattenden of Drinkwater Road, Duncan, was killed while watching illegal drag races on the highway to Lake Cowichan with about 100 other persons.

The jurors said in their verdict Tuesday, the death was unnatural and accidental, but the presence of the people on the road was a contributing factor. No blame was attached to the driver of the vehicle, Michael Sidoroff, who was coming home from his job near Lake Cowichan when the mishap occurred. Two other Duncan youths were injured at the time but not seriously.

Car clubs in the Cowichan Valley with the support of the municipal councils have been lobbying in Victoria for the last two years, in an attempt to get government support in setting up an organized drag strip in the area.

RULING ON BAY 'NO SURPRISE'

DUNCAN — Cowichan Regional Board Chairman Ralph Keir wasn't surprised by the provincial government's decision ruling out Cowichan Bay as a major forest industrial centre or port.

"The Cowichan Bay task force study made it pretty clear that there are other uses more suited for the area than a major port," said Keir.

He also said the Cowichan Bay residents have been meeting to discuss a community plan which doesn't include high density or industrial development.

Keir added, "It is hard to formulate a plan for the bay when it is split between the regional board and the municipality of North Cowichan.

Mayor Gerry Smith of North Cowichan who was happy about Resources Minister Robert Williams announcement, agreed with Keir on the difficulty of planning in the area.

When Smith was asked who should have total control, he said the regional board would be the most likely candidate.

NEWS AROUND THE ISLAND

Judge bans man from stores

NANAIMO — A Provincial Court Judge Wednesday banned a 29-year-old man from all Canada Safeway stores in B.C. for two years, after the man pleaded guilty to obtaining food by false pretences.

Wayne J. Johnson, 29, whose address was not known, was charged Aug. 27 after he bought food at a Nanaimo Safeway store, paying by a cheque for which there were insufficient funds in his account.

Johnson told the court he knew his account was depleted but wrote the cheque because he needed food.

Judge J. L. Davies of Vancouver, who is in Nanaimo on an exchange with Judge Stanley Wardill, also placed Johnson on probation for two years.

Another man, William Francis Vurns, 24, of Gabriola Island was fined a total of $500 after he pleaded guilty to shoplifting and common assault.

Court was told that a department store security officer was assaulted while apprehending Burns after he stole a watch band.

Judge Davies allowed three months for payment of the fine.

COURTENAY — By a vote of 5 to 1, School District 71 Trustees decided this week to continue salary discussions with teachers through its agent, the B.C. School Trustees Association.

The issue was sparked by trustee Andrea Erickson who questioned the school trustees' stand for provincial bargaining with teachers.

She suggested the board begin negotiations on a local basis to assuage "any ill feelings which may exist between the two groups."

She said she was speaking for some of the people who elected her. Responding to a question about the number of people she was referring to, she said, "quite a few."

Under further questioning the trustee said about 25 and indicated some of them had instigated the discussion.

Board chairman Terry Ryan said the board and teachers are still in conciliation.

He said the board was prepared to send a representative to a meeting in Nanaimo Monday, but "the Comox District Teachers' Association refused to attend."

Ryan said the board was not refusing to meet with teachers, and he called the whole thing a "procedural wrangle."

COURTENAY — A three-man committee was named this week to arrange a program to mark official opening of the $1.3 million arena-pool complex.

The board endorsed a recreation committee recommendation that groups wishing to rent the facilities contact the arena commission rather than the regional board office.

Officials hope to operate the complex year-round.

Directors also decided to buy an automatic chlorination system for the pool at a cost of $9,500.

The recreation committee will recommend a name for the complex at the next board meeting, and the secretary-treasurer was authorized to draft a bylaw establishing a District 71 arena-pool commission comprising six District directors and one school board trustee.

The board was told that former mayor, George Hobson, Fred Pisto and Art Cowan have agreed to act in an advisory capacity to the commission.

On his tour, Stanfield spoke in Toronto Wednesday night, and will in Winnipeg and Kamloops today before driving to Nanaimo Friday morning.

MP target

Query due on fate of L.I.P.

PORT ALBERNI — The Port Alberni parks and recreation commission will ask Comox-Alberni MP Hugh Anderson to define the criteria used to determine who receives Local Initiative Program grants.

Ald. Mel Massey, city council's representative on the commission, said the number of grants received is "not too good."

Parks and recreation superintendent Larry Beres said the commission has been involved in applications for a total of $80,000 worth of grants, but that only one had been approved to date.

He referred to the Exploring Our Past project, which will employ three people, and towards which the federal government will contribute $9,033.

The aim of the project is to make available to the public original newspapers, journals, diaries, books and photographs of the past in the Alberni Valley.

Four other grants have been received in the Alberni Valley, but the commission was not involved in their applications, Beres said.

Alberni wants college

PORT ALBERNI — City council will ask the provincial education department about its plans for post-secondary education in the Alberni Valley.

A post-secondary education force from the department visited the city in the spring, and has since published a report on its findings throughout the province.

Ald. Alice Chiko said the report did not mention the Alberni Valley in its recommendations, although it did recommend that a college or post secondary institution of some sort be established in the northern part of Vancouver Island.

"I feel there is a strong case for the establishment of a satellite of Malaspina College, Nanaimo, in the Alberni Valley," she said.

The report has proposed establishment of a college in Campbell River, she said. But she ovserved that the distance from west coast communities, such as Ucluelet and Tofino, to Nanaimo was greater than from Campbell River to Nanaimo.

Ald. Chiko also said that the areas of the west coast will grow more rapidly than other areas, and will need the satellite college in Port Alberni.

Police want five more in Alberni

PORT ALBERNI — The local Royal Canadian Mounted Police detachment here will ask the city to increase the police strength by five men in the 1976-77 fiscal year.

Staff Sergeant N. Nedzelsky, head of the detachment, said he now has 23 men on city duty for 30,000 citizens.

Nedzelsky said the ratio of policemen to citizens is not what it should be, noting that the detachment wants to try to keep up with the trends and growth of the city.

Short story contest approved

COURTENAY — Details of a short story contest organized at the junior high level have been outlined to the school board.

Fred Johnson, a Courtenay junior high school teacher, has organized the contest which closes Jan. 31.

The Comox District Teachers' Association has agreed to donate $100 toward prizes, and this was matched by Courtenay school trustees. The money will come from the board's special events fund.

In other school board business, trustees heard that a district Professional Day will be held Dec. 6, when all schools will close. Dr. Bruce Joyce will be the main speaker. The theme of the program is improvement of teaching techniques.

Fire chiefs will address maintenance and custodial staff on safety methods and procedures and use of fire-fighting equipment.

Search resumes for man lost in fall

NIMPKISH CAMP — A search was to resume today for a man missing after he and his wife fell 95 feet from a bridge into the Nimpkish River on the weekend.

The search for Harry Bowker, missing since early Sunday, had been suspended owing to high water. However reports Wednesday indicated the river level had fallen enough for the search to continue today.

The body of Bowker's wife, Lorraine, 26, was recovered Tuesday eight miles downstream from the bridge.

The Bowkers, residents of Nimpkish Camp, had attended a dance at Woss Camp 23 miles from Nimpkish Camp, Saturday night, and planned to go on foot to the bridge there to be picked up and driven home.

The bridge, however, had been closed for repairs, and the only span over the rain-swollen river at the site was a plank a foot and a half wide.

For pub application

Residents force hearing

PORT ALBERNI — A controversial neighborhood pub application will go to a public hearing Dec. 9.

The Green Door Motel at 1595 Redford St., has made application to the city for its approval for the proposed public house, but residents of the area have criticized the application.

The residents and some local groups have said they think the pub will create problems with traffic, noise and danger to children.

The pub location has also been criticized for failing to comply with the principle that neighborhood pubs be a place to walk to from home.

The Green Door Motel, it has been pointed out, "would be the first place on entering town and the last place on leaving town to get a drink."

The motel is on the southern Port Alberni artery of highway 3 and near the city limits.

Its location on a main artery is contrary to the neighborhood pub principle, they say.

City council has indicated to the motel owners that one of the conditions for their approval would be to provide one parking space for each three seats in the pub.

The motel owners have indicated that they will comply with a city planning consultant recommendation that no access be provided directly to Redford Street from the pub's parking area.

SPRAWLING SAVE is made by Pittsburgh Penguin's Gary Inness during action Wednesday night against Montreal Canadiens. Montreal's Guy Lafleur awaits a rebound but is effectively blocked out by defenceman Jean Guy Legace. Canadiens came from behind for a 3-2 win.

Red Kelly, who has been accused by club-president Harold Ballard of being a failure because he "is too nice a guy with his players, "showed up behind the bench with a bull whip Wednesday night in New York.

Not only didn't it help, things got considerably worse for the embattled Leafs, one of the big National Hockey League disappointments this season. They did manage to get in two scoreless periods, but in addition to taking a 4-1 beating from the Rangers, they lost two more defencemen to injuries.

Ex-Ranger Rod Seiling, who injured a knee in a collision with Derek Sanderson, and Jim McKenny, who hurt his shoulder, were both lost in the first period. A preliminary report on Seiling said that cartilage damage was likely.

Already on the injured list and not expected back for a month are Borje Salming and Ian Turnbull.

Now winless in their last six games, the Leafs faded after the first period and were outshot, 38-11, in the final 40 minutes. All of the scoring was jammed into the second period with Greg Polis and Sanderson doing most of the damage to the Leafs. Both scored once and drew a pair of assists.

Meanwhile, in other action Wednesday, Philadelphia Flyers and Atlanta Flames moved together in the Patrick Division, and Montreal Canadiens scrambled their way to another two points.

Reg Leach scored three goals for the Flyers in their 6-2 conquest of Detroit Red Wings, but the turning point may have come early in the second period when penalty-killer Bobby Clarke scored to give the Flyers a 2-1 lead.

It was 5-1 by the end of the period, and the Wings managed only nine shots in the last two periods. Clarke had four assists to go with his eighth goal while Leach drew one assist.

The Flames, two points behind the Flyers, got the second three-goal performance of the season from rookie-winger Eric Vail and eased by Kansas City, 4-2. The Scouts didn't manage one shot on goal in the second period as Flames finished off the scoring with three goals.

Canadiens, who have seldom managed to make things easy for themselves this season, had trouble in Pittsburgh. They eventually bested the Penguins, 3-2, with Jacques Lemaire breaking a 2-2 tie in the 12th minute of the third period.

In Minnesota, the North Stars recovered from an early shock to outlast Washington Capitals, 6-4. Capitals steamed off to a 3-0 lead, it was well into the second period before North Stars pulled even, and it was 4-4 until 11:01 of the third period.

Bill Goldsworthy, who made the pass for North Stars' first goal, gave his club a 4-3 lead, then broke the 4-4 tie with his second successful deflection.

Victory boosted the Minnesota club into third place in the Smythe Division, only one point behind Chicago Black Hawks.

Canucks end toughest test with 6-1 win over Blues

Vancouver Canucks came out of their toughest test of the season with more than passing marks.

When the West Coast club left home last week for a five-games-in-seven-nights test which had stops in Philadelphia and Boston, it was eight points ahead of Chicago Black Hawks in the National Hockey League's Smythe Division. Canucks return home today with an 11-point bulge.

They made their trip Successful by bouncing back from Tuesday's stumble in Kansas City to take St. Louis Blues, 6-1.

The victory, over one of the clubs they have to beat out for a playoff position, gave Canucks five points from five games. They have now played four more games than their closest pursuers, but the Hawks couldn't handle Buffalo Sabres Wednesday and could do no better than 1-1 while Canucks had a 2-2-1 trip.

John Gould, 25-year-old left-winger obtained last season in a trade with Buffalo Sabres, contributed his 12th and 13th goals of the season as the Canucks got away to a 3-0 first period.

It seemed for a while in the second period as if the lead might not be big enough, but Gerry O'Flaherty broke away from a ganging attack late in the second period to stop the St. Louis surge with the 4-0 goal.

In Chicago, Gil Perreault broke a 1-1 tie late in the second period with his 15th goal of the season. It came on a power-play, only 39 seconds after John Marks had stopped Perreault with a trip which drew a penalty.

Sabres, their latest unbeaten streak now at five games, are 13-1-2 since Oct. 24. And in that surge they have beaten Montreal Canadiens three times, the Hawks twice and New York Rangers once, and have tied Boston Bruins.

In West Coast games Wednesday, the Bruins got an unexpectedly sharp argument in Oakland before managing to subdue California Golden Seals, 3-1, and Los Angeles Kings just made it in getting a 3-3 tie with New York Islanders.

Seals, losers in their last six games and in nine out of their last 10, were no worse than 1-2 in the late going. And they were pressing for the tying goal when Gilles Marotte put a stop to things by deflecting a shot by Bobby Orr.

Central downed Oak Bay, 15-12, 15-12, in the other game.

S. J. Willis and Colquitz qualify for the Island championship Dec. 6 and 7 in Comox. Lansdowne can qualify if it beats the Sooke-Saanich winner in a challenge match Tuesday.

Rare full NHL slate

There have been 18 teams in the National Hockey League only since Kansas City Scouts and Washington Capitals joined this season.

Wednesday night's nine-game schedule was the first in the NHL's history and will happen only one more time during the 1974-75 season.

That occurs Saturday, Jan. 11, when all the teams will again be in action.

Harrison strikes for Crusaders

Jim Harrison's second goal of the game Wednesday night, coming with six seconds left in sudden-death overtime, gave Cleveland Crusaders a 5-4 win over visiting Winnipeg Jets.

The loss prevented the Jets from moving past the idle Quebec Nordiques into second place in the World Hockey Association's Canadian Division.

Harrison, traded to Crusaders by Edmonton Oilers, forced the 10-minute overtime session with a goal at 12:19 of the second period which tied the score at 4-4. Cleveland outshot the Jets, 13-4, in the third period but couldn't beat Ernie Wakely in the Winnipeg nets.

The victory gave the Crusaders a share of second place in the Eastern Division with Phoenix Roadrunners, who dropped a 4-2 decision to visiting Chicago Cougars.

WINNIPEG (4) — Norm Beaudin 2, Bobby Hull, Chris Bordeleau; CLEVELAND (5) — Jim Harrison 2, Gary Jarrett 2, Russ Walker. Attendance not announced.

McBride gains second goal

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bake McBride set two goals during spring training last year — a hitting average of more than .300 for St. Louis Cardinals and baseball's National League rookie of the year honors.

His .309 average as a centre-fielder gave him one goal. The Baseball Writers Association of America provided the other Wednesday in announcing his selection as top rookie.

"I owe most of the honor to Lou Brock," said the 25-year-old McBride at a news conference, referring to the St. Louis left-fielder.

Jenkins' comeback noted

Canadian pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, who compiled a 25-12 record with Texas Rangers of the American League after a 14-16 mark with Chicago Cubs in 1973, has been named Comeback Player of the Year in the AL by the St. Louis Sporting News.

The award in the National League went to outfielder Jim Wynn of Los Angeles Dodgers, who batted .271, hit 32 home runs and drove in 107 runs, rebounding from a .220 performance a year earlier.

Baseball's Hutch Award, voted to a player "who best exemplifies the fighting spirit, desive and character of the late Fred Hutchinson" was awarded to Danny Thompson, who played shortstop for Minnesota Twins the last two seasons with a form of leukemia. Hutchinson died of cancer in 1964 while manager of Cincinnati Reds.

And the second Roberto Clemente Memorial Award has been awarded to centre-fielder Al Oliver. The award is given to a member of the Pittsburgh Pirates who most exemplifies the standards of excellence established by the late Pirate rightfielder. Oliver batted .321 this season.

By JOHN LANGTON
Colonist Correspondent

QUALICUM BEACH — SOS stands for distress call, a soapy scrubbing pad in kitchens, and in Parksville it has found a new meaning.

The Society of Organized Services is an organization dedicated to helping needy people residing between Deep Bay and Nanoose.

At a recent annual meeting, president Pauline Touzeau outlined the group's many activities — volunteer drivers, homemakers service, meals on wheels, a thrift shop, an emergency assistance fund, a Christmas fund, a summer camp program, a community directory services, and delivering library books.

Homemaker service — With the introduction of the provincial home nursing care program in September, the calls on the homemaker service have increased considerably. During the last year service has almost trippled and now has 168 clients and 33 homemakers. Payroll for the homemakers was $14,187, paid by clients and the department of human resources.

Meals on Wheels — This service has been in operation for a year. Mrs. Touzeau reported that the food has been consistently well prepared and well received by recipients who pay $1.25 per meal. More than 3,000 meals have been delivered to 62 clients.

During the last fiscal year, S.O.S. had an income of $31,232. In addition to $12,433 raised by the Thrift Shop, the society received $9,700 in government grants, $2,052 for the Christmas Fund, $1,741 from sponsoring bingo and $1,658 from donations. There are various other sources of income but the society did not have to resort to door to door collections.

Total expenditures were $27,947. Administration cost $5,675, salaries $12,475, emergency assistance fund $917, and special projects $8,880.

The homemakers service finances are kept separate. This service cost $26,632. Of this over $20,000 was paid in salaries. The homemakers are classed as part-time workers, and clients or the department of human resources pay for these services.

One of the main reasons for the formation of the society six years ago, was to have an emergency fund available locally, without too much "red tape," to assist low-income persons in need of medical or other assistance who are without the means to aply for it.

In 1973 a new method was adopted for the distribution of financial donations to the Christmas fund, which proved popular. Instead of hampers, gift certificates for groceries were given to 62 families. In this way, recipients were able to select food they enjoy.

The group also treated 54 children of low income families to a week stay at a summer camp. The program cost $1,571. Local organizations donated $500. Some parents and the department of human resources contributed toward the cost with the society paying the balance.

Volunteers started a new service this year in co-operation with the local public library. Books are being delivered twice a week to people who can't get out.

Members of the local Big Brothers group received its charter in May and use S.O.S. for its office. The society has investigated the possibility of organizing a Big Sisters group.

Directors of S.O.S. would also like to undertake a project that would involve teenagers.

At present, the society is renting office space and its Thrift Shop. Eventually it hopes to acquire its own building or purchase part of a larger building. The group recently approved the establishment of a building fund.

After the business meeting, Dr. Sven Jensen and Thomas Beames talked about the camp for special children held at Cowichan Lake each summer.

Children with learning difficulties or emotional problems go to the camp for two weeks. At the camp, a team of highly qualified staff evaluate the childrens' individual needs and provide treatment. Later Jensen and Beames meet with parents and teachers, discuss the childrens' progress and make recommendations.

CRANBROOK (CP) — Two Cranbrook teenagers were found dead in a parked truck at Elizabeth Lake, south of Cranbrook Wednesday. Police said Gary Hess, 19, and Jacqueline Abbey, 16, died of carbon monoxide poisoning.

No decision on firehall location

COURTENAY — Several locations for a new firehall were discussed at a special meeting of city council this week.

Fire committee chairman Ald. Ron Webber said Tuesday that no definite decision was reached but several possible sites were discussed.

One parcel of land given serious consideration is adjacent to the city yard. The three-acre site, zoned for parkland, is owned by Marathon Realty—real estate subsidiary of Canadian Pacific.

Webber said a letter will be sent to CP to find out what the company wants for the property.

He said there was also discussion about buying enough land to house a new city hall and library as well as the firehall.

One other suggestion was that a new RCMP detachment office also be built on the three-acre site.

Webber said he understands the provincial government is studying the possibility of constructing a new building to house police and other government departments which cannot be housed in the courthouse building because of lack of space.

MacMillan Bloedel's $35-per-ton increase in the price of newsprint to its B.C. customers will boost the cost of the product $56 per ton from the levels in July of this year.

MacMillan Bloedel, B.C.'s largest newsprint producer, announced earlier this week the $35 increase will be effective Jan. 1. The increase follows boosts effective last Aug. 1 of $21 per ton. By Jan. 1, domestic newsprint will cost $265 a ton.

An MB spokesman said in Vancouver the increase was necessary because of continually rising costs of raw material and production and the low rate of return on investment in the newsprint segment of the industry.

A Vancouver spokesman for Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. said the firm was studying the situation. Prices for newsprint produced by B.C. Forest Products Ltd. are set at an average of MB and CZ. The fourth producer, B.C.-government-owned Ocean Falls Corp., sells its output offshore at a price based on U.S. west coast price.

Crown Zellerbach initiated the last price increase by raising the per ton cost by $28.50 to $237.50 in the Lower Mainland. It later dropped back to $230 when MB set that level.

Directors agreed Wednesday to consider at their next meeting a proposal to study the feasibility of a public schools course on the aims and objectives and histroy of the free enterprise business concerns.

Chairman of the chamber's education and youth committee cited the recent opening in Victoria of a provincial consumer services office "to handle complaints for alleged unfair practices by the business community" as detrimental to the image of free emterprise.

Other threats cited by Harvey were pressuring of the province by the B.C. Labor Council for a course in the schools system on the trade union movement in Canada as well as Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young's wish for consumer education studies in schools.

Discord jars symphony directors

The board discussed plans to raise funds to meet an expected defficit this season of about $30,000.

The board decided to write to Toronto and Calgary symphonies to seek their advice on the use of professional fund-raisers.

Two escapers plead guilty

MAPLE RIDGE (CP) — Gary William London, 28, and John William Marlow, 17, pleaded guilty in provincial court to escaping from the Haney correctional unit. They were remanded to Dec. 19 for pre-sentence report.

Seeing is believing

It isn't often that crane service operators indulge poetic streaks, but in this case one of the owner's of the Eugene, Ore., Hall Crane Service, Stan Parson's son, seized the paint brush when this new crane began to resemble — at least to him — a giraffe. And giraffe's without eyes wouldn't do at all, so he painted a largish eye on his steel-and-cables giraffe. Passersby often miss this eye-in-the-sky, but when they take a second look, a third one, accompanied with a smile, is sure to follow.

Twelve L.I.P. grants given to area riding

Grants totalling $237,773 have been awarded 12 Local Initiatives Program projects in Saanich-Esquimalt federal riding.

Marijuana: A glimpse through the smoke

By BOB CORBETT
Colonist - Copley Service

All of the pilots performed poorly. They veered off course, made wrong turns, changed altitudes wildly, stalled their aircraft, got lost and even ran out of gas.

More than half of them committed errors that would have resulted in tragic plane crashes.

The pilots had one experience in common. Before they took off, they all smoked a single "joint" of marijuana.

Luckily, all of this occurred in a research program at the University of California at San Diego using only simulated flying conditions. No one died.

The UCSD experiment is one of the latest in a series of investigations that amount to what can be called a third, more rational and more disturbing look at marijuana.

The first look was a period in which marijuana was considered a total evil, an addictive drug that led its unsuspecting victim inevitably into the vicious world of hard narcotics, like heroin.

All of this proved to be false, but it ushered in a second phase of marijuana, in which smoking a joint or two became a harmless and even socially acceptable thing to do. A recent report of the National Commission on Marijuana; Phase III, however, indicated that more than 24 million Americans are now using or have used marijuana.

The Reports, althoug admittedly inconclusive and often controversial, indicate that marijuana may be implicated in:

- Irreversibvle brain damage.
- Chromosomal defects affecting health.
- Reducing the body's immune or defensive system's ability to ward off disease.
- Altering hormonal activity to produce impotence or sterility.
- Sudden and detrimental behavioral changes.
- And, almost certainly, severe damage to the bronchial tree and lungs.

One of the factors that make the UCSD experiment important is that it involves only a single, normal dose of marijuana. Other tests often entailed heavy concentrations of the drug and are suspect for that reason.

The experiment is being conducted by a team headed by Dr. David S. Janowsky, director of psychiatric services at UCSD's University Hospital.

The UCSD test involved seven volunteer pilots of varying degrees of certification. All were run through a standard ATC-510 instrument flight simulator to establish their baseline performance.

The pilots were then given what Janowsky called a "social dose" of marijuana containing about six milligrams of tetrahydrocannabinol (THC), the major psychoactive ingredient of marijuana, or a placebo amount involving almost no THC. Eventually, all the pilots smoked the marijuana during the double-blind test in which neither they nor the researchers knew who was getting the heavy or light dose.

The results, according to Janowsky, were quite apparent. The performance levels of all the pilots, when judged against their baseline proficiency, dropped dramatically after they smoked the loaded quantity of marijuana.

Both the number of minor and major errors committed by the pilots increased significantly, he said, and more than half of the pilots made mistakes which under normal flying conditions could have been "disastrous."

However, Janowsky indicated, all the test really shows is that pilots should not smoke marijuana just before they take off.

He still regards marijuana as a relatively "safe" drug.

Certainly, he said, it is "much safer than alcohol, barbituates, narcotics and amphetamines."

All of these drugs, he said, have their positive and negative sides. Marijuana, he said, should be considered in the same light.

Marijuana, he said, undoubtedly has its hazards. It is capable of causing negative feelings — anxiety, depression and paranoia. However, he added, it may also prove to be a beneficial drug under certain circumstances.

In fact, Janowsky said, he and his fellow researchers are now in the process of preparing other tests that might demonstrate beneficial uses of marijuana — say as a nighttime relaxant for a harried business executive who otherwise might be in danger of having a heart attack.

However he wouldn't recommend the use of marijuana by minors. "It can't help them face life," Janowsky said.

Murderers married in prison

CRANSTON, R.I. (UPI) — Two convicted murderers have been married Monday night at the adult correctional institution in the first inmate marriage in Rhode Island, it was learned Wednesday.

Walter C. Jordan, 30, and Linda Kane, 29, had been seeking permission to marry for more than a year.

Corrections officials confirmed the woman was pregnant, the unborn child conceived while both were minimum security prisoners.

Donald Taylor, acting director of corrections, said he had not heard of such a marriage happening anywhere in the U.S.

The bride, a divorce convicted of the 1971 shooting of her 4-year-old daughter and the wounding of two other children, was given away by corrections officer George Fortier. Inmate Ronald Parenteau served as best man for Jordan, who is serving a 37-year term for the 1968 murder of a 73-year-old woman. Parenteau's wife Claire, not a prisoner, was matron of honor.

Unspoiled Caymans

Prices going up in quiet islands

By LYNDE McCORMICK
Colonist-Monitor News Service

Unspoiled, uncrowded, unhurried, unknown — and cheap. That's always been the consensus of vacationers who knew the Caymans. After a recent visit, I would agree, but not completely. The islands are becoming known and the prices are going up — and up.

However, they remain unspoiled, having absorbed a growing tourist industry rather than vice versa. There are no high-rise hotels, or blaring nightclubs (and none planned), no radio, no TV and no tourists - everywhere-you-look. Just sun, sand, water, and a wonderfully snail-paced life-style.

But if you're looking for a completely secluded Caribbean hideaway, it may already be too late.

In 1964, the Cayman Islands received about 4,000 tourists. In 1973, the number jumped to 50,000, according to government statistics. And estimates for the 1974 season indicate continuing growth. Fortunately the islands can easily accommodate the expansion. The relatively few hotels are filled to the brim during the winter season. But during the off-season you can walk for three miles on a brilliantly white beach in the middle of the day without seeing a soul.

Columbus in 1503 first sighted and dubbed them "Las Tortugas" because of the many green sea turtles found there. Following settlers eventually exterminated the reptiles, but in 1968, the first and only commercial sea turtle farm in the world was established on Grand Cayman. Products made from the 100,000-plus animals that live there, some weighing more than 1,000 pounds, constitute the country's chief export.

The Caymans grow increasingly attractive to vacationers, largely due to absence of the political, sometimes violent, tensions surfacing elsewhere in the Caribbean. The government vigorously advertises full employment, no poverty, and no race problem.

The lack of a radical income difference between visitor and resident, plus a population that is 20 per cent black, 20 per cent white, and 60 per cent mixed removes much potential resentment. Political and racial dissent can be found, but one must dig deep beneath the surface to find it.

Progress is extracting its pound of flesh, though. Litter, attributed mostly to the residents, seems to grow side by side with the dense vegetation, and junked cars smear what little there is in the way of sight-seeing.

Since the rise in tourism, the country has had to impose a season on lobster fishing. One native fisherman commented that "three years ago, lobsters were everywhere. You could bring up six with one dive. Now, even during the season, you're lucky to find one a month."

The big drawback to the Caymans is the prices. Tourist brochures bill the place as a lot of paradise for a little money, but don't believe it. Eating dinner at a tourist restaurant stands to cost at least (with the emphasis on "least") $20 for two. The native-patronized restaurants are considerably cheaper, but the fare is simple and not oriented toward foreign taste. In season, hotel rates are typically Caribbean sky-high, and a 5 per cent government tax plus 10 or 15 per cent gratuity tacked onto the bill, food included, puts an unexpected strain on the wallet.

Tahiti claims beery record

PEPEETE, Tahiti (AP) — Tahitians boast of being the biggest beer drinkers per capita on earth. Brewing is the largest industry in the islands after tourism. Two breweries operate around the clock to quench the thirsts of the pacific island population of only 120,000.

Gury Ji needs deep sleep

LOS ANGELES — Guru Maharaj Ji has moved to a $400,000 estate in Malibu, a spokesman said, and wants its location kept secret to prevent unbelievers from disturbing his sleep.

The Indian-born guru, who claims six million followers throughout the world, has lived for some time in Denver, and also has homes in India.

John Berzner, information director for the local Church of the Guru's Divine Light Mission, said the teenage "holy man" has taken to spending 75 per cent of his time in the Los Angeles area because many of his devotees live in the area.

The sleeping problem arose when a non-follower stood outside the Guru's Denver house at 2 a.m. one night screaming, "Maharaj Ji, Maharaj Ji," Berzner said.

Gift goes swimmingly

Gift from Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen's four children, new heated swimming pool at Government House received first try-out Wednesday morning from vice-regal representative, who likes to swim twice daily for physical fitness. Pool, 44 by 25 feet, located on south side of Government House, has still to get finishing touches.

Oh, how the money Rolls in

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Rolls-Royce dealer Charles Schmitt didn't notice the recession Wednesday — he sold one man seven of the classic cars for more than $1 million.

Among the seven were the Queen Juliana Rolls-Royce Phantom, worth $280,000, and a 1950 Rolls valued at $200,000.

Schmitt would not disclose the identity of the buyer, but did say the man was in the coal business in Kentucky and planned to start a museum exhibiting all the 78 special versions of the prestigious automobile. He said the same purchaser had previously bought Rolls-Royces worth $1.6 million.

Next move up to provinces

Trudeau won't ease oil tax demands

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau, stepping directly into the growing resources dispute with the provinces, refused Wednesday to back down an inch on his government's controversial taxation policies.

In a major Commons speech, he defended Ottawa's plan to charge income tax on royalties paid by resource companies to the provinces. He rejected Alberta and Saskatchewan claims that Ottawa is trying to take control of resources.

Both Ottawa and the provinces must co-operate to ensure that oil, natural gas and mineral companies can survive, he said. But Ottawa had already modified its position and the next move was up to the provinces.

He said the federal government must prevent the total oil and gas revenue windfalls from going to one or two provinces. All Canadians had a right to share in the wealth, he argued.

He also said proposed changes in the formula for calculating federal equalization payment to poorer provinces was within the terms of a general agreement reached last March when he met with the provincial premiers.

Despite claims to the contrary by Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney, he said, the changes suggested by Finance Minister John Turner in his Nov. 18 budget were in keeping with the March understanding. In fact, Saskatchewan, one of seven poorer provinces receiving equalization payments, would be slightly better off than under the March agreement.

He also disputed claims by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed that there was no advance warning of

To protest land inaction

Chief warns blockades may be erected again

Highways across the province could be closed in a repetition of last summer's blockade by Cache Creek Indians, an Osoyoos Indian chief warned Wednesday.

Chief Jim Stelkia said in Victoria the Osoyoos band, and at least 21 other bands, were "fed-up with the reasonable approach. Our strategy is to close off all roads across British Columbia, with all people affected."

However, Philip Paul, land claims director of the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, now meeting in Victoria, said Stelkia's comments did not represent union policy.

But, he added, the chiefs will be discussing strategy today and will not be ruling out forms of direct action such as highway blockades.

Paul said many Indian people did not recognize 24 land surrenders, which took about 24,000 acres of Indian land out of Indian control between 1912 and 1916.

The union has been negotiating with the provinces to have the surrendered lands restored to Indian ownership, Paul said, but the negotiations have been unsuccesful.

"We approached (Premier) Barrett," Stelkia said, "but he wouldn't see us in the Parliament buildings. We were turned away to civil servants who know nothing."

Paul said "regular channels of communication haven't worked," and the union, while it will be discussing different approaches, is "forced to look at direct action."

U.S. senators urge threat to pipelines

WASHINGTON (CP) — Seventeen United States senators suggested Wednesday that the U.S. could either interfere with or tax Canadian oil supplies carried in pipelines across American territory unless Canada removed its tax on crude-oil exports to the United States.

However, a state department legal expert said anonymously that interference with the oil or unreasonable taxation on it would violate international trade laws and would probably be illegal under American law as well.

The suggestion came in a letter to State Secretary Henry Kissinger, signed by 17 senators who represent a broad spectrum of opinion in the U.S. upper house.

"Certainly, it is our hope that such a drastic measure will never be adopted by the United States," they wrote.

But they called the pipelines which cross U.S. territory "bargaining chips" and called on Kissinger "to enter into immediate negotiations with the Canadian government in an effort to eliminate this tax."

Kissinger is in Peking at the moment and there was no immediate comment from the state department.

The letter said:

"As you know, the United States has several bargaining chips that could be used to induce the Canadians to remove this tax.

"For example, most of the oil consumed by Canada east

B.C. may set up tax retaliation

Provincial crown corporation tax procedures will be reviewed by the British Columbia government after Premier Barrett returns from China, Development Minister Gary Lauk said Wednesday.

Lauk denounced the federal government's intention to tax provincial crown corporations to ensure Ottawa collects its "appropriate fair share" of revenue generated by rising oil and gas prices.

The provincial government must look at retaliatory steps to be taken, he said, adding that B.C. "is watching closely" any moves by the Alberta government.

The minister described the federal government's proposal to tax crown corporations as "an outrageous approach."

The federal budget tabled Nov. 18 imposed federal income tax on royalties that resource companies pay to the provinces. They were previously tax deductible.

Confidence vote tomorrow

Turkey totters near collapse

ANKARA (UPI) — Turkey faced a deep crisis Wednesday with the imminent fall of its government, the devaluation of its currency and the threat of President Makarios' return to Cyprus.

The Republican People's Party doomed the new government of Premier Sadi Irmak by announcing the party would vote against it in Friday's confidence vote in the national assembly, thus reopening a 70-day cabinet crisis.

Irmak's fall would reopen a government crisis that began Sept. 18 with the collapse of a coalition under former Premier Bulent Ecevit, who has been trying to force early elections, apparently in hope of cashing in on the popularity he won by sending Turkish troops to Cyprus in July.

The news that Makarios had started home to Cyprus provoked dire predictions.

Makarios was ousted in July by a Greek-led coup. He started home from London Wednesday, with a first stop in Athens.

Foreign Minister Melih Esenbel told a questioner that "the Turkish government will take the necessary measures" if the lives of Turkish Cypriots are threatened.

"Archbishop Makarios has always played the leading role during the incidents of violence and disagreements in Cyprus," Esenbel said.

Alpaslan Turkes, the Cyprus-born leader of Turkey's Nationalist Action party, told newsmen: "If Makarios returns to Cyprus, the Turkish armed forces must launch a third offensive and capture the entire island."

In an unrelated development, Turkey's central bank announced a devaluation of the Turkish lira against nine West European currencies to keep it linked to the sagging dollar. The value of the German mark went up from 5.25 to 5.65 lira and that of the Swiss franc from 4.77 to 5.21.

Ship fined after spill

COQUITLAM (CP) — The Liberian freighter Ogden Clipper was convicted in provincial court of polluting Burrard Inlet and fined $7,500. The court was told that 10,000 gallons of heavy bunker oil was spilled Jan. 26 while the vessel was loading fuel. A spokesman for the crown said the ship's owners will be faced with an $86,000 bill for cleaning up the spill.

Selassie won't die

Execution denied

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — Ethiopia's military government denied reports Wednesday that it had passed a death sentence against former Emperor Haile Selassie, the African monarch whose stand against fascism before the Second World War moved the world.

The military regime, whose leaders ousted the 82-year-old Selassie, said he was being held under guard in Addis Ababa for his safety.

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Wednesday he had sent a letter to the military government in Ethiopia protesting the recent execution of 60 former military and civilian officials.

'Alberta oil richer by $100 million'

SASKATOON (CP) — The Alberta oil and gas industry will increase its revenue this year by about $100 million despite federal budget stipulations making provincial royalties a non-deductible tax item, John Richards, independent MLA for Saskatoon University, said Wednesday.

He said he obtained his information from a confidential Alberta government report on the effects of federal Finance Minister John Turner's budget on the province's petroleum resource industry.

He said the report stated the oil industry would still be left with a rate of return of between 9 and 10 per cent despite the combined impact of Alberta's royalty provisions and the federal budget.

"Since the Nov. 18 budget reduced by one-quarter the proposed federal income tax on oil and gas, the net profit to Alberta oil and gas industry after deducting federal income tax and provincial royalties of $2.62 per barrel is $1.6 billion, up from $1.5 billion in 1973."

He said the report also discussed contingency plans under which the Alberta government intended to reduce its provincial taxation of the industry by $150 million to $200 million annually to ease the tax burden.

Ottawa's con game 'sickening'

TORONTO (UPI) — Conservative leader Robert Stanfield ripped into the federal government Wednesday night for deceiving Alberta and Saskatchewan in a "con game" on oil pricing and taxation.

"This may seem like slick gamesmanship to the wheelers and dealers in the Trudeau cabinet," he said, "but to me it is one hell of a sickening way to see confederation being abused . . .

Help makes trip possible

● People Tree will help fund. Page 9.

She won't be going home alone this Christmas.

Her boy, Roddy.

Roddy's grandmother.

It's been six years since Roddy's mother has seen her.

This Christmas Roddy will meet the woman, who until this last summer, was never mentioned.

"We fought over how I was living my life," she says to explain the six dark years.

"That's all over and nothing is going to keep us apart this Christmas."

The trip is going to cost money. The kind of money a waitress in Victoria — with a son and no one else — has trouble finding, particularly at Christmas.

The Colonist 500 fund can help make their trip a bit easier. Last year donations to the fund totalled $27,000.

Hijackings and killings not our aim, says PLO

CAIRO (UPI) — A Palestinian leader said Wednesday the Palestine Liberation Organization was against plane hijackings and the killing of innocent people, including Israeli civilians, "be they on aircraft or in their homes."

PLO leader Salah Khalaf made the statement a few hours after the PLO in Beirut announced the arrest of 26 persons suspected of involvement in the hijacking of a British Airways VC-10 and said that it would put them on trial in an open court.

Khalaf, better known by the code name Abu Iyad, said the arrests were made on his orders. He said he hoped the hijacking of the British jetliner to Tunis "will be the last incident of its kind in our time."

Abu Iyad, who is the No. 2 leader of the Fatah guerrilla organization after PLO chairman Yasser Arafat, said "some Arab countries" were primarily to blame for the Tunis hijack because they had been aiding and financing dissenters from the PLO.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Women's group goes too far

Our minister of education, in supporting the Status of Women, has stated that "there is an obvious need for a women's study course in our schools." It is not obvious to me. I see a need for many things, but such a course is definitely not one of them.

What right has a minority, self-interest group such as the Status of Women to interfere in the school system? Especially as they have shown very little concern for children. I object to having young people exploited (for exploitation it is) to feed the petty grievances of this group.

As for elimination of "sexist references" in the textbooks, how supposed leaders in education can so concern themselves with this, yet give no thought to the lack of quality in these books, baffles me.

Take care, Mrs. Dailly, lest you create a monster.

The case for helping others...

Lately I have read and listened a great deal to people's opinions against help for the poor at home and elsewhere. Unfailingly they point out the mistakes being made by the authorities responsible for the distribution of the goods. There is nothing I can do about that, but I too have an opinion and mine also is based on facts.

At the end of the Second World War, I involuntarily joined the ranks of the bombed-out victims in the Hague, Holland. If it hadn't been for the goodheartedness of people, at home and abroad, who gave what they could afford, there would have been more victims, then, and afterwards.

The night after the bombardment, in the middle of a terrifying holocaust, there was a man doling out slices of bread to the bewildered survivors.

It was March 3, 1945, a Swedish ship had been allowed to enter the harbor in order to unload bread, and perhaps other things, for the starving population of Holland. I don't know who the man was, or where he came from, but he showed us that he cared.

It is people like him who gave us a reason to go on living, not the righteous criticizers, nor the through-hunger - and - despair degenerated looters.

We must remember that we cannot protect ourselves from disaster or grieve by closing our eyes and plugging our ears. However, we may still have time to do something.

- We can let people starve to death and make the innocent suffer by pointing out that some degenerated beings might take advantage of our gifts.
- We can give, in spite of the degenerates, in the justified hope that at least some poor people might get what they so desperately need and thereby remember us as fellow human-beings.
- If we don't give what we can comfortably afford and clearly understand, be it food or otherwise, the consequences might be severe, but when they arrive, it'll be too late to cry.

. . . And another view

Re the starving millions of Asia and Africa. May I suggest that the western nations supply free food only to the governments of starving people who do not spend million of dollars on armaments.

India spent millions on perfecting the atom bomb and on war weapons yet she and others have not got money to pay for food for their starving peoples.

I suggest that the Canadian government spend their grants of millions of dollars on her own people instead of on the so-called underdeveloped countries, and starving.

I am sure nobody ever made grants to the Canadian people when they were struggling to improve their country.

Behavior at UN 'shabby'

After watching the news this evening (Nov. 22) I felt I must make a comment regarding the recent decisions of the UN during their discussions of the PLO question.

Firstly, I could not believe that such a distinguished body as the UN would even consider listening to the murderers of athletes at the Olympics, of innocent bystanders in airports and of children in Israeli schools.

I was taught in elementary school that it is not polite to walk out on someone when they are addressing themselves to the question at hand. Yet while these so-called diplomats would give audience to murderers, they could not dain to listen to the remarks of a charter member in good standing.

The UN voted to allow the PLO to be seated as observers; there were 37 abstentions in the vote and Canada was one of them. Surely we know how we feel about this question, yet we fear to step on any toes. I wonder why? After all, we have quite a bit of oil left despite all this talk of shortages by 1982.

I guess we have lost some of the intestinal fortitude our fathers and grandfathers showed during the two world wars. Did they fight and die for principles that would allow murderers to receive standing ovations at the UN?

Jersey, too

Sweden, Monaco not comparable

As a visitor to your beautiful city and a reader of editorial pages I cannot help but wonder how the writer of the letter "Taxation riddle a puzzlement" (Nov. 24) manages to equate the country of Sweden with petty places like Monaco and the island of Jersey.

I cannot quote many figures regarding taxation in Sweden but would note that the Swedish people enjoy one of the highest standards of living in the world at the present time, having passed Canada in that category some years ago.

To digress from Mr. Kerfoot's theme, when the Swedish premier was in this area for a visit some time ago, he was questioned regarding B.C.'s brand of Socialism and replied that Mr. Barrett and his crew were merely "dilettantes" in this particular field.

I would mention in passing that my feelings are that the Roosevelt "new deal" of the 1930s was far more socialistic than the "Barrett Years" will be in the final analysis.

'Teachers' eyes reflect dollars'

The recent letter in which the president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association applauds Mrs. Dailly for the legislation regarding teachers' salary negotiations, which approves the use of the Big Stick to clout the people of the various school districts, is another example of the power the teachers' union in particular and the other unions in general have over the present government.

The president's claim, on behalf of the teachers, that Mrs. Dailly's action was democracy at work is, in my opinion, not an example of the normally recognized interpretation of democracy. The basic interpretation of democracy is rule by the majority. The B.C. school trustees, representing all the voters in the school districts, wanted provincial salary bargaining; the teachers' union representing a much smaller number won, because the government interceded on their behalf.

It is noted that the teachers in districts 61, 62, 63 emphasized via the radio, that they are not bargaining on a provincial, regional or zonal basis. However, during last weekend teachers from the three districts joined forces as a zonal group. It is assumed the meeting was for the purpose of establishing a united front against their individual districts with respect to wage and fringe benefit demands.

The cost of education is a tremendous burden on the taxpayer. School District 61 budget has increased from $20 millions to $40 millions in approximately five years and Camosun College has increase from $1 million per year to almost $1 million per month in a similar period. I suggest, subject to maintaining a high standard in the academic fundamentals, it is essential that the B.C. school trustees be given every encouragement in their efforts to decrease the rapid rate of escalation in educational costs.

The current practices of the B.C. Teachers' Union, plus the white paper recently presented to the government, which I understand includes recommendations to decrease the authority of the school trustees (the representatives of the people) in favor of the teachers, plus the most apparent militant attitude of their provincial representatives, plus the recent illegal withdrawal of teacher services in some districts, certainly does not encourage a harmonious teacher-community relationship.

I doubt very much if the current activities of the teachers' representatives enhances the respect of any individual associated with teaching. It is certainly not in keeping with my image of most teachers of earlier years, whose eyes, in most instances, reflected children, not dollars, and they were recognized as highly respected members of the community.

Houseboaters may be evicted – legally

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Staff

Esquimalt, that nice little town where controversies appear to be unthinkable, is about to do something quite nasty.

Mayor Art Young and his six aldermen are determined to get rid of a half-dozen houseboaters who have established permanent floating residence at West Bay Marina.

Young said this week that council may have found a way to "do it legally."

We'll know for sure Monday night when Esquimalt's zoning committee will get a legal opinion of the matter.

It all depends on whether a houseboat can be classified as a boathouse, legally, that is.

Esquimalt has a bylaw regulating boathouses, but there is no reference anywhere to houseboats.

If the lawyer tells the committee Monday that boathouses and houseboats are the same thing in a legal sense, council has the clout it is looking for in its confrontation with the houseboat owners.

A short letter from the town hall and the houseboaters will have to weigh anchor.

Esquimalt wants to get rid of the houseboats because it fears they might be the beginning of a floating slum.

Council also doesn't like the fact that the houseboaters don't pay property taxes. Legally speaking, they aren't on municipal property; their boats are below the high-water mark.

The easiest way out of what council feels is a dilemma, is to tell the houseboat owners to get lost.

This attitude appears to guide council even though the houseboats are neat, well-kept, and offer their occupants different life style.

Council might also consider that there is a housing shortage and that houseboats, which can be built for about $20,000, may be a good alternative.

But it seems that houseboats don't fit into the order of things in Esquimalt.

The only hope the houseboaters have is to fight back until council is willing to make allowances for the new, the different, the unfamiliar.

A delegation of houseboaters at Monday night's committee meeting might be a good start.

By ANTHONY TUCKER, from London

The sugar substitute market has received a boost just when it might be most useful. Doubts about the safety of saccharin have finally been dispersed by a massive retrospective study of diabetics.

The study was carried out by the Radcliffe Infirmary at Oxford. Detailed statistical analyses of the records of thousands of diabetics who have taken saccharin for many years have shown that there is no detectable correlation in human populations between saccharin consumption and cancer.

This finally resolves the conflicting evidence of different kinds of animal experiments, some of which indicated that saccharin was safe and some which implied a possible cancer-causing effect. It might provoke a re-examination of the animal-based evidence.

With the latest surveys and forecasts indicating, respectively, that British shoppers are buying about 1,800 tons more refined sugar each week than a year ago, and that next year there may be only about two-thirds of the predicted sugar demand available, the shift to sugar substitutes might be swifter than many think.

A recent issue of the British Nutrition Foundation bulletin lists half-a-dozen potential sugar substitutes, all of which might be better for your waistline and your health than a resolution of the so-called sugar crisis, without taking into account presently available substitutes such as fructose.

The trouble with fructose is its cost, although with cane and beet sugar costs rising rapidly the gap is beginning to narrow. Fructose is the sweetest of natural sugars and the interesting development is the identification of naturally occurring and similar chemical structures in the oak sugars. The implication is that there may be many unexplored routes to low-cost fructose.

The main target of sugar-substitute research is the range of substances which are not simply sweeter than sugar but many hundreds, or even thousands, of times sweeter than sugar. Since in many situations — jam, for example — these cannot replace sugar, they are called artificial sweeteners.

United States manufacturers have been looking hard at a substance called stevioside, which comes from the shrub Stevia reabudiana Bertonia, and is used by natives in Paraguay as a sweetener.

It might be thought that, as a naturally occurring substance, stevioside would avoid the unpredictable and undesired side-effects of a wholly synthetic substance, but this sweetener — altough about 300 times sweeter than sugar and easy to extract — has a steriod component that makes it unacceptable to western food authorities.

There is, however, real hope in certain kinds of berries that would be easy to cultivate, and also, strangely enough, in orange peel. The "serendipity berry" (Dioscoriophylum comminsii) yields a glycoprotein called monellin that has already been cleared in basic toxicity tests in the United States and is around 3,000 times as sweet as sugar.

This substance, like a similar glycoprotein from the Katemfe berry (Thaumatococcus Danielli Benth), at the right dilution appears to stimulate the taste buds in a way similar to cane and beet sugar, and with none of the hard after-taste which disqualifies saccharin as a sweetener for many obese non-diabetics.

Huge game haven sought

By JON FERRY
Colonist Reporter

A proposal to set aside a 284-square-mile big-game wilderness in the Spatsizi region of northwestern B.C. as an ecological reserve climaxed Wednesday's annual meeting of the recently-formed provincial ecological reserves committee.

The proposal, presented to the committee at its University of Victoria hearing, calls for protection of a "unique ecosystem" including big-game now threatened by hunting pressures.

The rugged alplands of the Eaglenest range and the smooth Spatsizi Plateau provide a haven for the giant Osborn caribou, Stone's sheep, mountain goat, grizzly, timber wolf and other large mammals.

Rejected earlier

A similar proposal for a park reserve was turned down 18 years ago by the Social Credit government.

But now provincial ecological chairman Dr. Bristol Foster (former Provincial Museum director) says he will recommend the NDP government make up for lost time and slap protection on the region by next hunting season.

Since its inception three years ago, the ecological committee has established 55 reserves to benefit scientific research.

Total area of all 55 reserves so far is about 90,000 acres.

Limited hunting

The new reserve proposal — outlined to the committee by two zoologists, a botanist and a big-game outfitter — will mean setting aside 181,757 acres with no hunting and a further 1.34 million acres as a buffer zone with strictly limited hunting.

Foster told the Colonist there appeared to be no major reservations from provincial mining and forestry authorities at Wednesday's hearing about the mammoth reserve, the closest thing to an East African game park that the province possesses.

Marine reserves

Several of the others called for setting aside for the first time below-high-tide marine reserves, enabling scientists to study samples of endangered flora, soil and animal life intact.

U-Island marine parks were proposed for Rupert and Holberg inlets, the Satellite Channel Centre (at the centre of Saanich inlet between Salt Spring Island and the Saanich Peninsula), for Botanical Beach, Port Renfrew and for the Openit Peninsula.

The committee aims to set aside 100 reserves by the end of 1975. "Top priority," says Foster, is the Spatsizi proposal.

Richter
... in hospital

Four faint at dinner

Former B.C. agriculture minister Frank Richter collapsed, and three other men fainted, during a B.C. Federation of Agriculture convention dinner at The Empress Wednesday night.

Richter, Social Credit MLA for Boundary-Similkameen, was taken by ambulance to Victoria General Hospital where a spokesman later described his condition as fair.

Two of the three unidentified men who fainted were admitted to hospital and discharged after an hour.

A Victoria city police report gave the reason as "a bit of a closed atmosphere" and not enough ventilation.

Dick Stocks, federation manager, said the Crystal ballroom, where the dinner was held, was "extremely warm" and that the air-conditioning had been turned off during an after-dinner speach by Paul St. Pierre, Vancouver newspaper columnist and a former Liberal MP.

There was a doctor present, he said, and artificial resuscitation was administered to Richter before the ambulance arrived.

The three other guests at the convention fainted within 20 minutes after Richter's collapse but were revived by fresh air. There were 270 persons in attendance.

Landlords cool suite war but united action in air

There is as yet no concerted action among Victoria landlords to withhold vacant suites from the market in protest against the new provincial rent increase ceiling — it's simply up to the individual landlord.

That's the position outlined by Clayton Warren, Greater Victoria Apartment Owners' Association secretary, who said Wednesday he had no clear idea how many local landlords would join the protest action.

"It's up to the individual landlord if they want to take any action or not."

Warren, whose organization represents some 300 landlords operating 11,000 suites in Greater Victoria, said the landlords' new pressure tactic was designed to encourage prospective tenants to write the government asking permission to pay higher rents.

More than 500 Lower Mainland landlords voted Tuesday night at a closed meeting in Vancouver not to offer empty suites periodically and for varying lengths of time in the battle against the government over the new 10.6 per cent annual rent increase limit.

The landlords belong to the B.C. Rental Housing Council, the parent body of both the Victoria and Vancouver Apartment Owners' Association.

However as Warren pointed out, many Victoria landlords were not able to attend the Vancouver meeting.

Sewage plant gets nod

The Capital Region Board Wednesday gave the planning go-ahead for the Sidney sewage treatment facility expansion by its engineering staff.

The board adopted recommendations of its public works committee that once the alterations start the Sidney plant would become a region facility.

A cost-sharing formula will be worked out to ensure that Sidney taxpayers would not be penalized by the plant expansion which will include connections to the Oceanographic Institute and the Pat Bay Airport.

Capital Region plan adopted

The "major goal" of Capital Region Board chairman J. W. Campbell's term was realized Wednesday when the board adopted the official regional plan.

There was only one negative vote in the resolution that saw the plan adopted without discussion on fourth and final reading, after more than 18 months' study.

The regional plan gives guidelines for commercial and residential development of the entire Capital Region for the next 20 years.

Campbell said he was "delighted" with the plan.

He said the region was "one of the first in North America in which complex urban areas have voluntarily passed a plan of this kind and accepted restrictions on their basic powers to make development restrictions in their areas."

Campbell said there were no plans by the region waiting in the wings for passage of the plan. However, he said preparation of plans for a sewer system in Langford-Colwood would have been impeded if the plan had not been accepted.

'Ghastly murder': three questions unanswered

By JIM BRAHAN
Colonist Reporter

Three questions still remain unanswered today in what was described by Victoria Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre as "the most ghastly bloody murders one could ever imagine."

His remark came during an inquest Wednesday night in the deaths, Sept. 6, of two Esquimalt women whose bodies were found battered, hacked, and stabbed in the storeroom of a neighborhood grocery store at 1325 Esquimalt Rd.

The unanswered questions: Who did the killing? Who left bloody footprints on the floor of the store? Who was a "mysterious" man seen at the door of Ray's Food Market about 2:20 p.m. on the afternoon of the murders.

The coroner's jury ruled that the women, Mrs. Jane Isobel Plume, 51, of 1153 Munro, and Florence Isobel Bevan, 62, of 1324 Lyall, both employees of the store, had been murdered by a sharp instrument by person or persons unknown.

Victoria city police identification officer Bernard Brennan testified that the two women had received a total of 75 or 80 wounds, some of which went right through their bodies.

"This indicates a tremendous amount of force was used," he said, adding that in his opinion a "very good knife" or a knife plus a small cleaver-type weapon, such as a machete, was used.

He also submitted 27 photographs of the murder scene one showing three or four shoe prints "put there by blood from the sole of someone's shoe."

He told the jury there was a considerable amount of blood at the scene but not much "splashing" which indicated the wounds were made after the victims had died.

Christine Green, 1324 Esquimalt Rd., told the inquest she and her boyfriend had tried to return some pop bottles to the store at about 2:15 p.m. the day of the murders and had found the door locked.

Shortly after, she said, she had seen an "older man" apparently trying to open the door with what she believed to be a key. She said the man was wearing gray pants, and a light blue short-sleeved shirt.

Miss Green said that a few minutes later she and her boyfriend returned to the store; this time the door was open and on entering they thought the store was empty. But when she bent over to place some pop bottle cases on the floor she then noticed the two victims lying on the storeroom floor.

Police were then called.

Vivian Harper, 508 Constance, a co-worker of the two women, told the jury they worked four hour shifts generally from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m., with the store owner working from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

She said that she wasn't on shift Sept. 6 but it was customary for the three to visit each other at the store regardless of who was on shift. She would have been in the store about 1:30 that day had she not stopped to talk to a girlfriend.

Arthur Squires, owner of the food market, said Mrs. Plume had come to work shortly before 1 p.m. and he had left the store shortly after that when he had received a telephone call from his wife asking him to meet her in Victoria.

"I just couldn't clue myself in," Squires said, describing the scene that faced him when he returned to the store about 2:45 p.m.

He said at first he thought somebody had been hit by a car in a crosswalk near the store. "I just couldn't get myself to believe anything had happened to anybody I knew."

He told the inquest there was only one entrance to the store and that was the front door.

The coroner told the jury the "mysterious man" seen by Miss Green doesn't seem to have been located by the police.

St. Jorre said he also wondered what would have happened if the storeowner had not been called into town by his wife at that particular time, because a man on the premises might have had an effect on the killer's actions.

He told the inquest the store was not located in a large city but in a quiet place with quiet, friendly people as customers, "and a bloody murder takes place."

Suspect arrested in robbery attempt

Police said a young man walked around the store for a while after entering shortly before 3:30 p.m., and then went up to Mrs. Stubbings. He held one hand in a pocket, possibly to simulate a gun as he said:

Mrs. Stubbings immediately screamed for help from her 26-year-old son, who was working in the rear of the store. When he appeared, the would-be robber fled on foot.

Police said the two store staff members described the would-be robber as 18 to 20 years of age, five feet, 10 inches tall, thin, fair complexion "with peach fuzz" and wearing hip-patched blue jeans.

The Bay Street Armory positively bristled with disaster Wednesday night but this time it was all make-believe.

The disaster exercise started with an explosion that (supposedly) rocked Victoria high school, injuring some 100 students.

It was then up to Victoria's various emergency services to cope with an ensuing flood of casualties while patients were whisked by ambulance from the armory to area hospitals.

The exercise, which started at 7 p.m., was coordinated under the provincial emergency program and was designed to hone the skills of medical and emergency personnel in facing a major disaster.

Traffic was diverted from the armory neighborhood but police reported no major snags — or real disasters.

Esquimalt to keep research facility

That word came Wednesday from Victoria MP Allan McKinnon who said rumors that DREP might be shut down because of defence cutbacks, had been dispelled by the federal government.

McKinnon said in a telephone interview from Ottawa that Defence Minister James Richardson had given his assurance in the Commons Wednesday that there were no current plans to close DREP or cut back on its operations.

Toys on TV scarce, or gone, from stores

By JIM GIBSON
Colonist Reporter

Children whose Christmas wishes are prompted by television ads and reinforced every afternoon in front of the family set could be disappointed on Dec. 25.

Unless their parents act soon.

Jim Hollier of Eaton's, Victoria, predicts there will be a toy shortage, of particularly television advertised items.

Other department store merchandisers agree.

Although the toy shelves at Eaton's are far from empty, Hollier said, pointing to one popular line, "there's no way I should have shortages like this."

Already hotly television-advertised items like the Evel Knievel stunt cycle are extinct in most city department stores and Baby Alive, the doll that eats and "excretes," will be a vanishing breed by this weekend, department store spokesmen are predicting.

Hollier said this number-one-doll-of-the-season is sold out at the factory but he hopes to get more through a distributor.

However if Hollier succeeds the price of the doll will have to go up several dollars from Eaton's $16.99 price to allow for the distributor's profit.

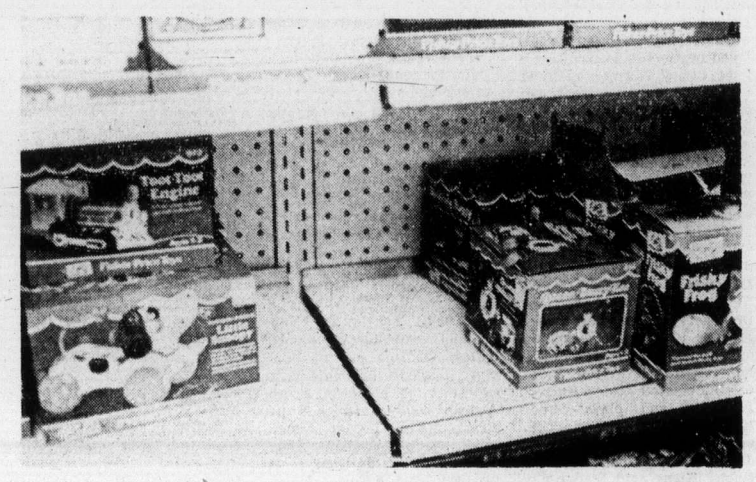
The oil crisis led to a shortage of plastics last spring. Toy manufacturers using plastic products, Hollier said, cut back their lines and raised their prices.

He estimates prices of all toys are up 15 to 25 per cent over last year.



Gaps appearing on shelves

Hollier thinks people know of the shortages and are buying early.

Hollier points out the popular Barbie Hair Care Centre has two imitations, both costing a bit less.

The Woodward's spokesman said he has looked at toys he thought would be winners and watched them stay on the shelf.

But to many parents, television advertising is the spur, despite government restrictions in advertising aimed at children in Canada and the U.S.

"Some kids come in here with a broader knowledge of toys than we have," a spokesman for The Bay said.

But a chain-buyer in Vancouver for Woodward's stores said: "Television does not guarantee success the way it did 10 years ago. There are so many items on TV the consumer can now choose," he said.

Local merchandisers agree that television advertising does not dictate a sell-out.

However, the buyer admits television-advertised items usually do better than non-advertised ones. He said the advertised items have "built in TV dollars" that push their price up and some of these same items suffer as a result.

The buyer went on to warn parents that some TV-promoted toys have little play value — the feature that keeps a child fascinated long past Christmas morning.

But still children seem to be asking for TV items.

Some parents are rebelling against the "brainwashing" of their children, says Joyce Hopkins whose Windmill Toys and Gifts, Douglas, specializes mostly in toys imported from Europe.

Miss Hopkins, who said she'd gladly send a wreath to the funeral of the Barbie Doll, does not carry TV toys.

Certainly it would be hard to convince one mother who walked down the toy aisle of The Bay this week while her two girls picked out all their favorites from television, that they hadn't been clued in somewhere.

"They've been brainwashed. They know everything on the market," she said.
